CBA request turned down

Business group may push more tourism after grant denial

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council's denial of a $2,500 grant to the Carmel Business Association may have freed the CBA to do what the council didn't want: promote tourism.

As long as we get credit for it (promoting tourism) we might as well do it," Lee Chamberlin, executive director of the CBA, told the Pine Cone/Outlook July 12.

In past grants to the CBA, the council has attached a condition that city funds may not be used to promote tourism or business.

In compliance with the council wishes, the business organization has minimized its outside the area promotions of Carmel, Mrs. Chamberlin explained.

But the council denial of the CBA grant request means the 450-member business organization is free to mount any kind of advertising or promotional campaign the board wishes, Mrs. Chamberlin said.

The CBA does have a $40,000 annual budget and used the city money to supplement the cost of office help.

"This leaves us independent of them so we can advertise and do promotions," she continued. "We've been very quiet with no hard sells. Everything we've done here has been soft sell."

The council — in a June 26 confrontation between Councilman David Maradei and Mayor Charlotte Townsend — rejected a CBA request for $2,500.

The mayor argued vainly that the organization performs a vital service for the city.

The money is needed to supplement the annual CBA budget of $40,000. The funds would be primarily used for office help to answer telephone calls for information, the mayor said.

Mayor Townsend pointed out that city hall staff generally refers telephone calls for information to the CBA.

The city probably would have to hire additional help to field all of those questions if the CBA did not have an office, the mayor argued.

But Maradei said that the CBA is in the business of attracting more tourists to town — something he said the city does not want.

Councilmembers Helen Arnold and Robert Stephenson said little, but joined with Maradei in rejecting the CBA grant proposal. Councilman James Wright was absent.

IT IS the second time in three years that the council has not given a grant to the Carmel Business Association.

The council in 1982 did not provide any money because the CBA had printed a brochure promoting Carmel with the funds given to the organization in 1981.

But last year Mayor Townsend successfully argued that the city should give a $1,500 grant to the CBA.

Maradei's remarks that the council has no way to find out whether the grant is used for office help or tourism promotions angers Mrs. Chamberlin.

"Mr. Maradei has never looked at our books. He has no idea of our accounting system. We do fund accounting," she said.

Mrs. Chamberlin also is perturbed about council assertions that business people merely want to make a buck off the tourists at the expense of the quality of life here.

"We have tried very hard to be nice people in Carmel. Our businesses have a lot of money invested in this town. They have their life savings in this town," she said.

"Why wouldn't they (merchants) want this to be a lovely little spot?"

Business people would be foolish to have the philosophy of getting every dime they can. The council appears to have the philosophy that business will do anything for a dollar," Mrs. Chamberlin said.

Even the CBA office staff of herself and Julia Felis — who make $11,000 between them — work extra hours to help the city, Mrs. Chamberlin said.

"We do it because we love Carmel. We want Carmel to be a lovely little garden spot. We work our tails off to keep it that way."

The council needs to understand the daily trials of a business person in town, Mrs. Chamberlin believes.

"I think they need to understand the life of business people in Carmel. Business people in Carmel are not making a fortune. I've heard a lot of sad stories.

"They work from morning until night. Most of our stores are two persons. They're too exhausted to attend a council meeting. The council has to appreciate that," she said.

Merchants also "put up with a lot of inconveniences" to do business in town.

In addition to what she termed anti-business regulations, Mrs. Chamberlin cited parking and postal service as a pair of these "inconveniences."

"There is a lot of hassle over parking. Parking has been a problem in Carmel for years," she said. "Our city fathers are not facing it. They're blaming the merchants. This (parking) is usually the responsibility of city hall."

MAIL SERVICE is another inconvenience, she said.

"The mail is not up until after 9:30. This

Mail boxes unnecessary

Dear Editor:

I very strongly disagree with Werner Landau (June 28) in regard to mail delivery in Carmel. Carmel is still one of the most unusual towns in America (as well as being the prettiest) and one of its chief claims to distinction is its lack of house numbers.

The concept that traffic and parking problems would be relieved by mail delivery seems ludicrous. The place is packed with tourists and residents go uptown on errands every day, anyhow — not just to the mail. The post office has a fine 10-minute parking lot which accommodates everyone, so where is the parking problem?

I too, like Mr. Landau, am a senior. It happens that I live at present in Carmel Valley rather than in my native town of Carmel but I get my mail at the post office. For a period of three months this year I had a broken arm and could not drive my car to go for the mail.

I made arrangements for others to pick up my mail and they were glad to do so. My mother, who was blind and otherwise disabled in the last six years of her life, lived in Carmel and got her mail from the post office. She never went there. Friends and family were more than glad to pick her mail up for her.

There is not and never has been any clear necessity for mail delivery in Carmel and house numbers would certainly destroy the spirit of our wonderful little town. I did not mention unpaved roads, by the way, except in connection with Perry Newberry's campaign for mayor — a matter of history.

We still do have a lot of unpaved streets, however, contrary to Mr. Landau who perhaps does not get about enough to see them. But this is irrelevant: the issue is house numbers.

As for explaining where one lives to department stores, etc. — if that is too much trouble, then I suggest the aforementioned complainant should move out of Carmel and into a more ordinary town! Obviously he is a newcomer or would not seek to violate Carmel's spirit.

Public access needed

Dear Editor:

I have walked over the sand dunes of Spanish Bay and Asilomar Beach for more than 20 years. In these sand dunes you can walk freely and you don't have to watch out for cars because there isn't any asphalt or concrete in the sand.

The forest and the sand dunes are too beautiful to destroy with development schemes. Monterey County supervisors were not serving the public interest when they rezoned these sand dunes for a 300-room hotel, 85 condominiums. and another 18-hole golf course. All this will be ugly in comparison to what we have now, and people like myself will be excluded from this land.

There should be prescriptive easements throughout this property, including free public access to the public property at Stillwater Cove, Fanshell Beach, Bird Rock Beach, South Moss Beach and Asilomar Beach. Please write to the Coastal Commission about public access here.

Public access to the coastal public lands should be free and unrestricted. There should not be any "compromised special deal" which deals out the public interest. Our Monterey County supervisors have deliberately contradicted the public interest because of graft.

Since the Pebble Beach intercorporated phenomenon intends to deny the public free and unrestricted access to our coastal lands, I think that they should donate all 236 acres of Spanish Bay for an open space public park. Then I could continue to walk my dogs there under verbal control without fear of being harassed by the Pacific Grove dog-catcher or the State Park rangers-corporites.

It's mayor's right

Dear Editor:

To those individuals who say that the mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea should now withdraw her public endorsement of one of the candidates for Fifth District Supervisor so that the people may make a free choice in the November election is an astounding suggestion!

No person or set of persons can properly establish a standard of expression for others. And because we live in a democracy each of us has the right to free speech; a denial of that right is unthinkable.

Voltaire said it eloquently: "I might disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

Cost versus benefit

Dear Editor:

On June 4 the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District held a protest hearing to determine if the district should proceed with a plan to provide erosion control work along the Boronda Reach of the Carmel River. The protesters were unsuccessful and the planning is being carried forward.

If, in an election tentatively scheduled for Sept. 11, a majority of registered voters residing on these properties approve the proposed project, the plan will be implemented.

Property owners will be faced with a benefits assessment of $4.67 per linear foot each year for a five-year period for the project. Total cost to the 83 owners will be over $466,000.

Assembly Bill 1329 provides two ways that a protest can be successful. One is that a simple majority of holders of title to the properties file protests. The other is that the protests represent "one-half or more of the assessed valuation of the real property" within the zone.

What does assessed valuation have to do with success or failure of a protest? Valuation has no necessary relationship to linear feet along the river. It is quite conceivable that two or three owners might represent one-half of the valuation but have a relatively small amount of river frontage. For this project, linear feet along the river would appear to be a much more logical criterion, one which is perfectly correlated with costs to individual property owners.

Supports mayor

Dear Editor:

I am disappointed in Howard Brunn. His orchestrated campaign to pressure the mayor of Carmel into changing her primary election endorsement of Karin Strasser Kauffman for Fifth District supervisor shows very poor judgment.

No citizen of Carmel should be required to support Brunn for supervisor just because he, too, is from Carmel. The mayor of Carmel has excellent company in her decision to support Karin Strasser Kauffman rather than native-son Brunn. In fact, it seems the people who know Brunn best — from his performance on the Carmel City Council — almost all endorse Karin Strasser Kauffman.

The voters of Carmel rejected Brunn when he ran for mayor in 1980. Four of the five members of the Carmel City Council endorse Karin Strasser Kauffman rather than Brunn. So does the head of the Carmel Planning Commission. So does the Carmel Pine Cone.

What do the leaders of Carmel know that the rest of the Fifth District ought to find out?

Free access

Dear Editor:

I believe that the public has the right to have free and unrestricted access to the coastline of Pebble Beach.

The coastline is public property and the Coastal Commission is trying to establish unrestricted public access to the public property at Stillwater Cove and to many other public beaches in Pebble Beach.

The Coastal Commission needs the support of all Californians to restore access to the public lands on the California coast.

If you want to help the Coastal Commission restore free public access to Stillwater Cove, please write to the California Coastal Commission, Room 310, 701 Ocean St., Santa Cruz, Calif. 95060.

Wasting water

Dear Editor:

My wife and I are frequent visitors from Southern California and dearly love your quaint and beautiful town. Our favorite activity is the early morning walk through town before breakfast. It's peaceful, deserted and quiet.

This morning I observed something that I felt the need to point out to you. While walking by a little shopping mall (Jack London's is part of it) I saw a gentleman washing down the sidewalk with water.

We Southern Californians have always been told by those from the North that we are not conserving our share of this precious resource. Our family, I am proud to report, is one exception to this generality and I find it quite amusing to see it happening in an area that is "water conscious."

So, in the future, please go easy on us Southern Californians — we're not all bad. And it wouldn't hurt to do a little police work in Northern California. (This gentleman may be a transplanted Southern Californian!)

We love your city and wanted to pass along an observation.

City, business feud is painful

THE IMBROGLIO between the Carmel City Council and the Carmel Business Association seems to have deteriorated even further, with the result that the council once again has denied funding to the organization.

Although the CBA request for $2,500 for operational expenses for the 1984-85 fiscal year is small by city budgetary standards, it has generated a considerable amount of ill will between the bodies that represent the city and business interests.

Councilman David Maradei said at a June 26 session he could not vote for the CBA request because the organization promotes tourism which — according to Maradei — the city does not want.

The CBA, through executive director Lee Chamberlin, responded that the funds would be used to defray office expenses and said any promotions undertaken by the group are low-keyed.

City officials — including council members Maradei, Robert Stephenson and Helen Arnold, who voted against the CBA request — neither understand nor appreciate the role of business in the total Carmel community, according to Mrs. Chamberlin.

While this latest clash of business vs. residential interests isn't surprising, given the strongly pro-resident character of the council, this longstanding friction between the two factions brings honor to neither.

It could be argued that the CBA, with an annual budget of some $40,000 doesn't need the $2,500 from the city. But as a gesture of goodwill, it could have gone a long way toward a constructive bridge between the city council and the business community.

The CBA has a good point that the council attitude smacks of arrogance toward the free enterprise "engine" that generates a huge portion of the municipal budget for everything from police to pavement.

Some kind of balance, or accommodation, between the two factions would be in the best interests of everyone. Tourists will come to Carmel whether the CBA advertises or doesn't advertise, whether the council likes it or not, and whether the council supports the CBA or not.

What's really at stake is harmony between different interests in the city which should complement, rather than attack, each other.

Proud of graduation

Dear Editor:

As members of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education, we are disturbed at the amount of publicity given one student who chose not to participate in the Carmel High School graduation ceremony.

Four years ago, students, parents, community members, and the board of education spoke loud and clear that they wanted a dignified graduation that students and parents would be proud to attend. The current administration has achieved this goal and are the ones who should be receiving the recognition and publicity of a job "well done."

The staff, students, and parents will remember this graduation as one of dignity and class. The students were well behaved, the class speakers were excellent, and the after-graduation reception hosted by parents was a fantastic culmination to a quality graduation.

THE LOS Padres Dam currently is one of the major water supply sources on the Monterey Peninsula and many people believe a new facility is needed to meet growing water demands. A new dam will increase not only the new water connection fees but also the cost to homeowners. (Michael Gardner photo.)

THE SPILLWAY at Los Padres Dam runs full during "wet" years but the water slows to a trickle in dry winters, which the peninsula experienced in the winter of 1983-84. How to best manage future water supply is the premise of a proposed Monterey Peninsula Water Management District ordinance.

Water district directors postpone decision on financing of new dam

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WITH "more questions than answers" still to confront, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors is not expected to adopt an increase in water connection fees at its Aug. 13 meeting.

Instead, directors are expected to review the myriad of issues — such as the impact the increase will have on new low cost housing projects — and postpone a decision on the proposed new fee until their September meeting.

Directors then could adopt an ordinance to increase the fees as an emergency measure, which would make it effective immediately rather than after the usual 30-day wait for new regulations to become law.

That schedule for adoption of the ordinance is recommended by water district manager Bruce Buel.

Adoption of the increased fees appears to be a mere formality since directors at their July 9 session approved a ban on permanent water connections until after the ordinance is approved.

However, customers who need hookups will be given temporary approval and warned that a permanent connection will be authorized at a higher rate when directors adopt the ordinance.

That higher connection fee is expected to be 4.5 percent per $100,000 valuation. That is more than a 10-fold increase over the current 0.4 percent hookup fee.

For example, the fee for a $200,000 home now is $800. The new connection charge will be $9,000.

The increase in fees is necessary to pay for the proposed $34 million dam project on the upper Carmel River.

The philosophy of directors is to have new development pay a large share of the cost of the dam. But that higher connection fee is expected to pay only about 40 percent of costs.

The other 60 percent of the dam bill will be paid by all customers. If the dam is constructed, the average residential customer will pay an extra $17 monthly in a couple of years.

Buel has suggested that directors not try to adopt the water connection ordinance in August because of the unresolved issues posed during and after the July meeting.

"There are far more questions than answers," Buel told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook July 12. "We haven't come up with those answers."

FOR EXAMPLE, there is the question of what to do with the additional income if the dam is not constructed.

Director Dick Heuer of Carmel Valley has suggested that the money be specified for the dam. If the project is not completed, then the funds should be returned "with interest," he said.

But another course of action would be for the board to use the funds for other water supply projects — such as the proposed aquaculture program — if the dam is not constructed.

Adoption of the increased fees appears to be a mere formality since directors at their July 9 session approved a ban on permanent water connections until after the ordinance is approved.

The impact of the 10-fold water connection fee increase on low and moderate-cost housing projects also will be addressed by directors.

And, directors must tackle the issue of how to handle projects already approved or under construction.

Many contractors are worried about how the new fees will affect their fixed bids. Since a contractor figured the bid at the lower water connection fee, "they may end up losing money on the construction," Buel said.

"The board may exempt or 'grandfather in' these people who already have building permits. It's only a matter of equity," he said.

To prevent a rush on building permit applications, Buel suggested that the exemption apply only for those projects that obtained building permits on or before July 9.

Although the new water connection fees generated the most controversy July 9, directors acted a variety of issues in a meeting that spanned almost five hours. An earlier afternoon session on the aquaculture project lasted another three hours.

At the evening session directors:

• Delayed until Aug. 13 a request to authorize more tests to determine if there is an earthquake fault directly below the proposed dam site. The study also is expected to reveal how large the fault is if one exists.

• Accepted without comment a letter from a Sleepy Hollow resident who threatened legal action should directors choose that area for road access to the proposed dam.

• Authorized a $25,000 feasibility study for the proposed aquaculture projct that would involve chemically treating sewage so that it can be used as drinking water.

• Postponed until Aug. 13 action on an ordinance that was challenged by California-American Water Co. officials. The ordinance would give the district broad powers over how Cal-Am manages water.

• Cancelled the Sept. 11 election for a special assessment district in the Boronda Road area to pay for river erosion control projects.

CONSULTING GEOLOGIST Jerry Weber told directors that more tests are necessary before he can be absolutely certain that there is an earthquake fault directly underneath the proposed dam site.

"It is probable a small cross fault does go through the dam site," he said. "We cannot say this unequivocally."

Weber said he is "75 percent certain" that there is a fault but that it "probably is not a capable (active) fault."

Director Dick Heuer of Carmel Valley has suggested that the money be specified for the dam. If the project is not completed then the funds should be returned 'with interest,' he said.

But Weber said more testing — which may not be completed until fall — must be conducted to determine the extent of the suspected fault.

"We can find faults everywhere. The question is finding out if it's a capable fault."

If the fault is capable or found to be part of the Cachagua fault, then directors may be forced to move the proposed dam to another location.

"The one that goes through the dam site is probably just a small cross fault," Weber said.

Asked whether directors should continue with the current dam proposal, Weber responded: "I think it's worth pursuing. It's a question that has to be looked at very carefully."

Weber said the heavy ground cover has made it difficult to conduct tests to ascertain whether a fault exists. He suggested that

THE PATIO and fireplace at the Village Corner Restaurant could be replaced under a proposal from the restaurant owners. (Photo by Drew Hagen.)

Enclosed patio at Village Corner pondered by board of adjustments

A PLAN to enclose the Village Corner outdoor patio will be presented to the Carmel Board of Adjustments at 4 p.m. Wednesday, July 25 in city hall.

Applicant Robert Carlisle proposes to build a solarium on the patio and remove the popular fireplace at the longtime Carmel restaurant, northeast corner of Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue.

The land use committee of the board has recommended denial of the project. The committee believes that the patio is part of the "ambiance and charm" of the village.

In other action, the board is to consider:

• An application by James Giles to move his jewelry store, now inside the Hanson Galleries building on Ocean Avenue, to Cottage Row, under construction on the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

• A proposal by Allan Kelemen to open a coffee counter on the southwest corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue.

• Dennis Rowedder's application to open a real estate office on the southeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street.

• The underground parking garage as part of Joe McEldowney's seven-unit condominium project on the west side of Junipero Avenue between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

• John Fields' request to serve food at Sade's Bar, south side of Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets.

Carmel business group may promote tourism means two trips to the post office. That's a terrible inconvenience. In most areas the mail is ready for the businesses by 9."

"The businesses are very important to Carmel if they're going to keep the status it enjoys now," she said. "Business supports half of the $6 million city budget."

If the city forces business out of town, the residents will have to pay more taxes or services will have to be cut, Mrs. Chamberlin said.

Sunset Center, the forestry department and most of the police budget is financed by the hostelry and sales taxes, she said.

"They (council members) have to think about the quality of life our people enjoy now and what it would be like without the money from the businesses," Mrs. Chamberlin added.

'We have tried very hard to be nice people in Carmel. Our businesses have a lot of money invested in this town.'

"If half the businesses went out, what would happen? The taxes would be unbelievable in this town.

Mrs. Chamberlin also thinks that the council needs to take a more historic perspective of Carmel. The roots of the city lie with business and not residential development.

"Carmel has always been commercial. The early promoters of Carmel were not J.F. Devendorf or Frank Powers (both residential developers)," she said.

"It was S.J. Duckworth. It was his intention to make this a Catholic resort because of the mission out here. It was patterened after the Pacific Grove Methodist retreat."

"In 1886 it (the land) wasn't good for farming. It wasn't good for grazing. It was considered to be worthless," she said.

"If you look at early pictures of Carmel, it was pretty bleak. There were no trees. The houses were small retreats; they were not houses."

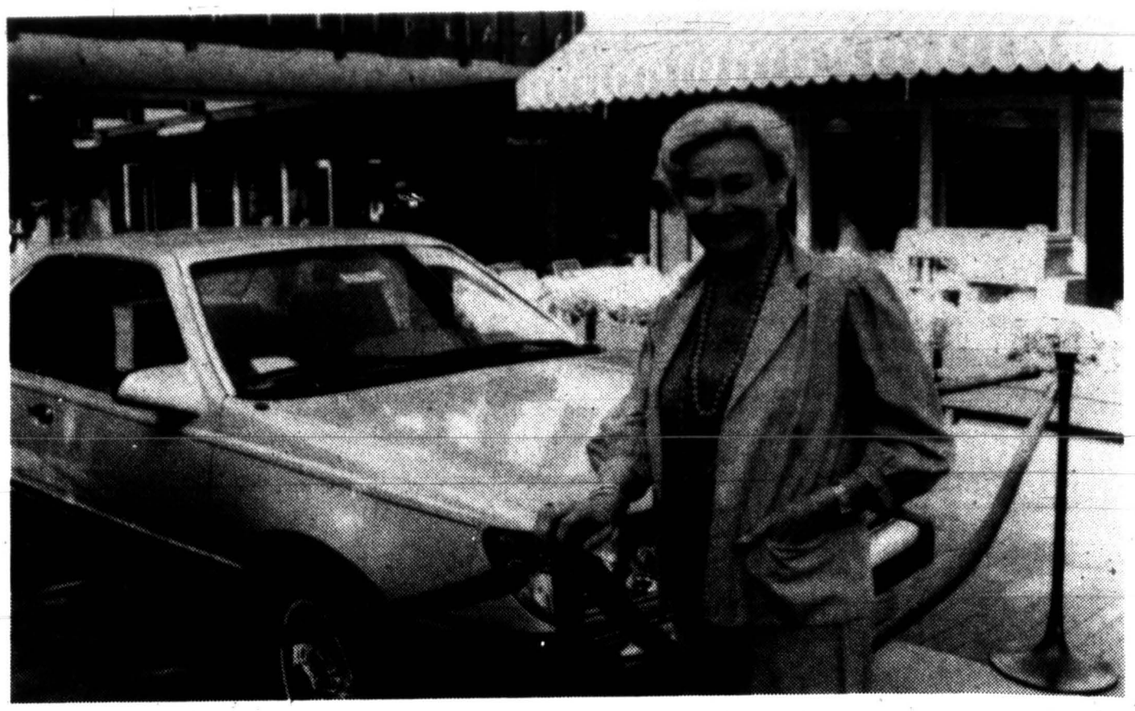
AFTER THE 1906 earthquake, writers and artists from San Francisco moved to Carmel for its Bohemian lifestyle, Mrs. Chamberlin explained.

The writers and artists who migrated south to Carmel obviously needed a place to sell their work. The commercial district was formed out of that need, she said.

It was not until 1929 that the city council adopted the oft-quoted ordinance that ruled business shall always be subservient to residential interests, Mrs. Chamberlin said.

Mrs. Chamberlin added that it is "really sad" that the council and business people are torn apart.

Asked if the CBA is willing to meet with the council to discuss mutual concerns, she responded: "Absolutely. Of course they would. But if the council doesn't understand what keeps Carmel ticking, how can you get your point across?"



PRESIDENT Ellie Lester hopes that a drawing for this car will help raise funds to more than offset the money lost when the city council rejected the Carmel Business Association request for a $2,500 grant. The drawing will be Sept. 22. Tickets are $2 donation each or six for $10. The car can be seen at Carmel Plaza. For tickets, stop by the plaza, see a CBA member or call 624-2522. Zambory plans to prod directors to start a new sanitary project

IT'S TIME to get moving on the $12 million water reclamation project, the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors will be told when it meets at 1:30 p.m. July 26 at city hall.

General Manager Michael Zambory hopes that by the July 26 meeting the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will have given final approval to a $9 million grant for the project.

If that approval is announced, Zambory plans to ask directors to direct staff to begin work on applications for increased sewage capacity.

Currently the district is allowed a capacity of 2.4 million gallons per day. Zambory wants to boost that capacity to four million gallons per day.

"We have to have additional capacity to take in all of the (growth) allowed by all of the land use plans being proposed or already adopted," Zambory said.

The district cannot arbitrarily boost its capacity without approval of the regional Water Resources Control Board based in San Luis Obispo.

But to provide that extra capacity the district has to have its reclamation project completed.

The state already has financed its 12.5 percent share ($1.5 million) of the project. The district will pay $1.5 million. The federal EPA is to pay $9 million.

The project already is underway and is about one-third completed, Zambory said.

The sanitary district has been ordered by the state to stop discharging effluent into Carmel Bay between the months of May and October.

The reclamation project provides for sewage treatment to the tertiary level. The treated sewage then is to be used for a variety of projects, including providing water for area golf courses.

Decisions on new dam postponed by directors

directors approve the digging of a large trench so that he can conduct more thorough tests.

At the request of Buel, directors postponed authorization of more studies until staff has the opportunity to review Weber's report.

Later, Buel said he plans to recommend that directors authorize experiments in the "knothole," which is an area where the geologist is most likely to determine the existence of a fault.

Although work on the dam proposal continues, directors have sought out another program to increase the water supply on the peninsula.

Directors spent nearly three hours in a special study session July 9 on the San Diego hyacinth reclamation program.

After the evening session, directors authorized $25,000 to finance a feasibility study of the aquaculture project.

The program basically treats sewage so that it can be used as drinking water.

There is a $20 million pilot program underway in San Diego to determine whether such a project will work there. However, completion of that study is not expected until about 1988.

The thrust of the San Diego project is the health safety of the reclaimed water, Buel said.

IT IS HOPED that scientific testing will reveal whether the water is safe, Buel said.

Buel said he drank some reclaimed water from the San Diego project.

"I've drunk it. It tasted fine. I didn't get sick," he said. "The water looks like water. It tastes like water. It smells like water. There's no way you could tell the difference."

Buel said it is important for the district to proceed with the project rather than wait for the results from San Diego.

The district would have to conduct the same experiments for safety as those underway in San Diego because the differences in climate, population and disease-carrying viruses and bacteria.

"We would have to prove that it works here the same as it does for them," Buel said. "We have to do a mini-experiment of our own."

The aquaculture project also could be used as a "fallback" if voters reject the dam when it is placed on the ballot in 1986, Buel said.

"It's a fallback positon to take and it's an investment in future water supply," he said.

Director Heuer said the aquaculture project would be "valuable even if the dam is built...as long as it's an investment in the future."

But Director William Peters of Carmel Valley disagreed. "I certainly would not support this and a dam. Do I want to spend $200,000 (cost of pilot project) to have an alternative sitting there when it comes time to vote on the dam?"

Peters suggested that directors later may want to place the aquaculture project on the ballot at the same time voters choose whether to build the new San Clemente Dam.

If the experiments prove successful, a pilot project for $135,000 to $235,000 could be undertaken between January and July of 1986, Buel said.

The direct re-use of the water — if approved — would not be available until July of 1992 at the earliest, Buel predicted.

The aquaculture project could provide up to 8,500 acre feet annually. Cost of the reclaimed water would be about $500 an acre foot compared to de-salinization costs of $2,000 to $3,000 an acre foot. (There are 325,851 gallons in an acre foot.), Buel added.

In a separate matter, directors cancelled a Sept. 11 election on the formation of an assessment district to pay for a river erosion protection project in the Boronda Road area.

THE $300,000 project is opposed by several large property owners who have ed a group called "The Committee for Common Sense."

The committee is headed by tennis ranch owner John Gardiner, the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, and property owners Fred Pomeroy, Margaret Lidstrom, Elaine Taylor and Tony deSegny.

Directors cancelled the election for several reasons, Buel said.

The district wants to work with the protestors to iron out concerns that they must pay for the project with little direct benefit to them, he said.

And, there still is no word on whether the district will receive a matching grant from the soil conservation service to offset the cost of the project.

There also was a timing problem to obtain a permit from the county to do the work, Buel said.

"We thought we could certify the environmental impact report in September and get the county permit so we could start work," Buel explained. "The county takes two to three months and doesn't start (processing) until an EIR is certified."

Additionally, the district would have to call for bids on the $300,000 bond, which also would need to be "validated" by the courts, Buel said.

With all of the delays "it would be impossible" to start work before the winter storms, Buel added.

The Committee for Common Sense has protested the cost and necessity of the project. Its members also believe the district did not follow guidelines adequately for a protest hearing.

Consulting geologist Jerry Weber told directors that more tests are necessary before he can be absolutely certain that there is an earcertain that there is an earthquake fault directly underneath the proposed dam site.

Buel pointed out that "we followed it (district law on protest hearings) to the letter."

In 1978, directors merely needed a simple majority of property owners to approve a project.

Later, so that the smaller more numerous property owners would not always force large land holders into paying for unwanted projects, the district changed the law, Buel said.

The new law states that a majority of the landowners who represent 51 percent of the assessed valuation of the property in the assessment district is required before a vote is called.

Buel said that of the 100 property owners in the Boronda assessment district, only 25 protested the proposed election. Those 25 represented 18 percent of the assessed valuation of the property.

THE LARGE property owners should share the costs of the project even though the work would be done downstream of the tennis ranch and saddle club, Buel believes.

"They're part of the problem and for the project to succeed they have to be part of the solution," he said.

Gardiner and the saddle club each developed projects on their property that forced the river to crush faster against the downstream property, causing more erosion, Buel said.

"I think it's agreeable these river property owners have some obligation to help the downstream property owners," Buel said.

Buel expects directors to order an election in the spring of 1985.

Those several Boronda Road property owners are not the only river residents upset at the water district.

One Sleepy Hollow resident has written the board to say he plans legal action if directors authorize road access to the proposed dam through that area.

"What we're doing now is planning. That's the whole purpose of the EIR," Buel said. "Any discussion of a lawsuit is terribly premature."

Directors have under consideration three proposed routes to the dam and all go through Sleepy Hollow.

The property owner claims that the better route — and less environmentally destructive — is through Cal-Am property on the southwesterly side of the river.

"It is imperative that the water management board realize that none of the (three) alternatives presented (is) acceptable," states a letter from resident Albert Merville.

"If implementation of any of the three is attempted, lawsuits will result."

Cal-Am also is not happy with the water district because of a proposed ordinance Cal-Am sees as an attempt take over its operations.

SILT THAT infiltrated the Los Padres Dam because of the Marble Cone fire is pumped out as part of an experimental Cal-Am project this summer. The silt is pumped into basins (above) and tested to see if it will be harmful to the local environment. The silt has taken up water storage capacity at the dam and may pose a threat to fish. Rescue efforts help steelhead on river

By MICHAEL GARDNER

STEELHEAD TROUT in the Carmel River have a helping hand in their struggle to survive.

Projects are underway at Los Padres Dam and on the river to keep young steelhead alive through the present dry spell, and to aid their reproduction.

Last winter's light rainfall has slowed river flow to a trickle and stranded tiny young steelhead trout in small, isolated ponds.

The lucky fish are being caught in a rescue project conducted by California-American Water Co. and the Carmel River Steelhead Association in conjunction with the California Department of Fish and Game.

Steelhead Association volunteers have spent two Sundays on the river, captured steelhead and moved them to a concrete basin at a Schulte Road well site owned by Cal-Am. The water company has allowed the association to use the basin facilities free of charge.

The project is 'purely experimental' because officials don't know how the removed silt will affect the environment around a dumping site, he added.

The basin now is home to about 100,000 steelhead, also known as smelt. The basin can accommodate up to half a million young steelhead.

The basin has running water from a device similar to a fire hydrant that pumps water out to simulate a river waterfall. The smelt leap through water which pours from the device.

Volunteers feed the smelt food pellets. But they hope two large bug-killing lights situated over the basin will provide more natural food for the steelhead.

The smelt will be replaced in the river once the water flow returns to a more natural level of about two and one-half inches.

Twenty miles to the east Cal-Am has two experimental steelhead protection projects underway at Los Padres Dam.

The first is a $67,000 dredging project to remove silt deposits from the dam bottom.

Silt removal is important for several reasons, Cal-Am Vice President and Manager Larry Foy told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook during a July 11 tour of the site.

First there are claims that the silt is harmful to fish and wildlife in the area.

"The Department of Fish and Game feels it's a threat," Foy said.

Secondly, the silt takes up space in the reservoir which could be better used for water storage, Foy said.

THE PROJECT is "purely experimental" because officials don't know how the removed silt will affect the environment around a dumping site, he added.

The silt is pumped from the dam reservoir into three nearby basins. "The silt and water is to be spread in the pits allowing the water to percolate into the ground," Foy said. "The dry silt will be tested for compatibility with native soils. If incompatible, the Cal-Am plan is to haul it to a disposal site."

The silt compatibility with the nearby soil, plant and animal life is important to the future of the project, Foy said.

If the silt does not pose any danger, it can be dumped near the dam in the "borrowing pit."

However, if the silt does pose a danger to the environment, then it may be too costly to haul it to another site.

The Marble Cone fire destruction of ground cover is the chief source of the large amount of silt that poured into the dam about 10 miles south of Carmel Valley Road.

The pilot project is expected to be completed at the end of summer.

Cal-Am and the Department of Fish and Game also have undertaken a joint project to protect steelhead as the fish pass through the dam during the annual migration in February and March.

The Marble Cone fire destruction of ground cover is the chief source of the large amount of silt that poured into the dam about 10 miles south of Carmel Valley Road.

Currently, juvenile steelhead must travel west over the dam spillway during their winter migration.

But danger lies in the 30-foot drop from the spillway to the river. Rocks are on the north side of the river and during low water flows many smelt die in the plunge.

To solve the problem, Cal-Am has proposed to pay for a metal slide to carry smelt safely from the spillway to the river.

The slide proposal has conceptual approval from the Department of Fish and Game. If final approval is granted, Cal-Am plans to install the metal chute later this summer.

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

Intersection work gets underway

BIG BOYS and big toys: A year has passed since the Carmel Valley Road landslide repair was finally completed, and the county is acting worried that Valley motorists are becoming too complacent as we drive without roadblocks all the way from the Village to Highway 1.

Ha! A new challenge has arisen, one guaranteed to challenge our sanity as much as our punctuality. The underpass at the intersection of Robinson Canyon Road and Carmel Valley Road is off the drawing board and into the hands of Granite Construction Co., which began demolishing the asphalt and decorating the landscape with orange and black warnings only last week.

The company estimates that the entire project will take eight to nine months, but local cynics — i.e., anyone familiar with Granite and the county and the Gregorian calendar — are betting on at least a year. Don Melton, who bears the interesting title of encroachment and subdivision inspector for the county Public Works Department, votes with the cynics.

Landmark Land Co., the Oklahoma folks who brought us Carmel Valley Ranch, is providing the funds for this latest engineering delight in the Valley. No further comment seems possible at the moment as the ding...ding...silence...ding arrhythmia of heavy equipment backing up outside the office of the Sage — above the Farm Center — is cutting dings into the concentration as well as...ding...the road.

ON A CHEERIER note, the Carmel Valley Trails Association has received several pledges of trail easements to expand the network of hiking and riding trails in the Valley. Since the formation of the CVTA last spring at least eight landowners have offered access across their land.

Most of these prospective trails will run along the Carmel River, though "feeder" trails across Carmel Valley Road also are planned. Gary Tate, director of the regional park district, has hired a surveyor to help establish the precise location of the future easements.

The park district will assume not only the maintenance of the trails but legal liability as well. The latter point may be of particular interest to property owners who are considering joining this important project but have concerns about a potential lawsuit stemming from a mishap on private land.

The formation of the trails association represents a tremendous effort on the part of its public-spirited originators, some of whom — such as Lucy Smithson — have been working for trails in the Valley for more than 15 years. Membership in the CVTA is now around 50.

Last winter the group gained valuable support from the Sierra Club, the CVPOA, the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, the Monterey County Horsemen's Association and the Monterey Vaqueros. Each of these groups wrote letters to the board of supervisors endorsing the appeal of the CVTA to move an existing trail easement out of the deepest part of the Carmel River and onto dry land.

Bestor Engineering gets the credit for placing the trail in the river bottom in 1975. County planners, upon learning of the peculiar and inaccessible location, noted that they must rely upon the advice of "experts" in the field and cannot routinely make on-site inspections themselves.

However, there's hope for the non-web-footed; the supervisors voted unanimously to support the CVTA's request to relocate the trail on dry land.

Now if only Landmark would fund a CVTA venture and hire Bestor and Granite Construction, we would probably acquire a trail system between condominiums, carefully linked by a tunnel and an overpass right in the middle of the riverbed. But then, as scribe Russell Lynes observed, every journalist has a novel in him, which is an excellent place for it.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) July 11 elected Jerry Foote to succeed Bob Greenwood as president of the board of directors. Also, Todd Wahle was elected vice-president to fill the vacancy created by Glen Chang's resignation.

Gene Erner and Val Hempel were elected as new directors, and Helen Hempel has taken over Cindy Hall's position as coordinator during Ms. Hall's six-month leave of absence.

Among the items discussed was the terminology in the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan. The language, especially the use of the terms "lot" and "unit," is so muddled that Todd Wahle described the last supervisors' meeting as "the most confusing I've ever attended in my life. Dave Young (county senior planner) didn't know what happened either."

The water management district activities which the CVPOA discussed are reported elsewhere in this issue.

If only they were listening now. A request to call the Sage if you like the Chateau Julien has borne fruit. Two people have followed up to say they think it's not so bad.

Wally LeValley of Carmel Valley said he wishes it sat further back on the property but notes that the barn it replaced "was no piece of jewelry." He added that the telephone company building in the Village is an eyesore and said "the Bank of America looks like it belongs in San Jose."

It is not the usual policy of this paper to print anonymous remarks, but this was different. A woman telephoned in support of the winery and refused to give her name with the rationale that if she were identified as liking it, people would refuse to do business with her.

She said there are always people who want things to stay the same, and who stand in the way of "progress."

"It does too look like a chateau," she protested. "People from San Francisco and people from Park Avenue (N.Y., presumably) will love it."

She added that the smell of burning wood and the sight of hay and firewood stacked at the location by the previous owner were really problems. Amen.

Parents, children get lesson on sexual abuse

SUSAN TASNER gave a talk at Carmel Middle School last week at the request of the summer recreation program supervisor.

But this discussion was not about basketball dribbling techniques, how to decorate leather or to demonstrate the proper plie' step in ballet.

Ms. Tasner's talk was on something perhaps far more important and unfortunately far too common — sexual abuse of children and how to prevent it.

About 50 parents and their children attended the session, which included safety tips and how parents can spot signs of sexual abuse.

Ms. Tasner is the education director for the Rape Crisis Center in Monterey. Before the July 13 talk, she talked with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The center has printed a couple of handouts of "A Parent's Guide" on how to protect their children plus "Signs of Sexually Abused Children."

The list of suggestions for parents includes tips in case the child is reported missing:

• Teach your child your telephone and the 911 emergency numbers, and his or her full name and address.

• Obtain a set of fingerprints of your child and keep dental records up-to-date and easily available.

• Keep a current photograph of your child available. Make a mental note each day of what your child is wearing.

• Know your child's unique features, such as birth marks or scars.

• Select a family "password" so that a child knows when the stranger is not Uncle Ben or dad's friend that came to pick the youngster up from school.

• Teach your child a plan of action if he or she becomes separated from you while shopping. For example, if separated you will meet at the entrance to the building.

• Teach your child that not all people are good. Teach him or her how to say no when someone asks if he or she would like a ride home.

• Teach your child the private parts of the body and that those areas are not to be touched by anyone, not even Uncle Fred.

• Teach your child that he or she is not to blame if someone does touch them or sexually assault them.

• Keep the lines of communication open. Listen to what your child says and believe him or her.

• Teach your child the "buddy system" so that he or she walks home with a friend. And to call that friend when he's home safely.

• Teach your child never to tell anyone that he or she is home alone. Always make sure that the visitor knows the "password" before letting him in the door.

THERE ALSO are some tell-tale signs of possible child sexual abuse, Ms. Tasner said.

Some of these symptoms are:

• Veneral disease, pregnancy and persistent genital or anal infections.

• Pre-occupation with aggressive sexual behavior. Constant hand manipulation of the genitals.

• Sexual knowledge inconsistent with the child's age.

• Bed wetting, excessive nightmares and loss of appetite.

• Chronic ailments such as stomach aches and vomiting.

Changes in attitude toward familiar adults. Extreme fear reactions.

Ms. Tasner showed the group a film called Better Safe Than Sorry.

The film stressed three major points. The first is that the child has a right to say no when asked if he or she wants a ride home or when an adult is touching them in the privates.

Parents or youngsters who need more information are urged to contact the rape crisis center, the police or the county children's protective services department.

Film critic Roger Ebert visits Carmel for taping

ROGER EBERT, co-host of the film review program on television At the Movies, calls spaghetti western and "Dirty Harry" movie star Clint Eastwood "Carmel's most famous resident."

Ebert, who also reviews film for a Chicago newspaper, was in town June 29 to film 60 minutes of tape on Eastwood for ABC television.

After the filming, Ebert briefly talked with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook about Eastwood's latest movie called Tightrope, and how ABC will use the locally-filmed show.

Ebert is uncertain how or when ABC will use the interview segment. He predicted it will be run as part of the program called Eye on Hollywood and also as a feature segment on the evening news.

As for Eastwood's Tightrope, Ebert promises that the actor's fans will not be disappointed although he does not play the "Dirty Harry" cop character in San Francisco.

"I liked it very much. It's much more subtle. It's a violent film and it's a sophisticated film," Ebert said.

Tightrope, which opens Aug. 17, has Eastwood as a New Orleans police detective investigating some "kinky murders," he explained.

Ebert filmed the segment at Carmel Beach, the Shell Gas Station, and Eastwood's Hog's Breath Inn before he did a wrap-up in front of Dick Bruhn's on Ocean Avenue.

The show is designed to show Eastwood at home in Carmel — a regular guy who gets gas at the corner station and actually hangs out at the restaurant he owns, Ebert said.

Ebert's standup closing drew a crowd of passersby on Ocean Avenue and he amused the audience up by having to go through several takes before the show was completed.

But the crowd was disappointed that Eastwood was not there for the wrap-up.

Afterwards, Ebert was approached by several fans who wanted to shake his hand and say they like him and his reviews very much.

In response Ebert poked fun at his co-host, Gene Siskel. "But what can we do about Siskel?," he barbed.

Ebert and Siskel formerly had the public broadcasting film review program called Sneak Previews. However, last fall they switched to commercial television and started the At the Movies program.

CV author tells why it takes courage to grieve

By ROBERT MISKIMON

GRIEF IS at once the most personal and universal of human experiences. And yet, it is also one of the most taboo subjects in our society.

That's why, according to Carmel Valley author and therapist Judy Tatelbaum, it takes courage to grieve.

The Courage to Grieve, in fact, is the name of her hardback book published in 1980 by Harper and Row, Inc. scheduled for paperback release in September. Already, the work has gone through four printings in hardback — an astounding performance for a book published practically without a promotional campaign.

"The publisher decided not to promote the book at the last minute," Ms. Tatelbaum said. "But the reception has been great. It's a subject people are hungry for. It's been given to people by friends, doctors, priests. Mostly, it's been word of mouth."

And that fact, in itself, speaks volumes about attitudes toward death and the grieving process, Ms. Tatelbaum reflected in an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"This has been a very taboo subject because we don't want to admit that we're going to die," she said. "We're very much apart from death in our society. That isn't the case in all societies, however."

'There was a 28-year-old woman who lost her mother and wasn't allowed to see her before she was buried. Several years later, she died of cancer. I'm convinced that the pressure to stifle our feelings and to put on a happy face causes a lot of illness.'

Ms. Tatelbaum pointed to the practice in some cultures of surviving family members bathing the deceased loved one before burial, the Irish wake, and the emotionally-charged Italian funeral as examples that not all societies and peoples deny death and the grieving process as Americans do.

"We still respect self-control too much in our society," she said. "This is really more of a WASP (white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant) thing, but people are afraid of their feelings everywhere. We tend to encourage people to stifle their feelings."

In her clinical practice, as in her personal life, Ms. Tatelbaum has seen numerous instances where suppressed feelings can cause mental and physical illness. Of all the feelings that can cause trouble when suppressed, grief can be the most damaging and lingering, she said.

"There was a 28-year-old woman who lost her mother and wasn't allowed to see her before she was buried," the author said. "Several years later, she died of cancer. I'm convinced that the pressure to stifle our feelings and to put on a happy face causes a lot of illness."

THAT WAS ONE of the primary reasons for writing the book, in fact. Ms. Tatelbaum knew both professionally and personally the importance of the grieving process and wanted to help others understand that "it's okay to grieve."

"I was 17 when my brother was killed in a car accident," she said. "My life stopped in a way, but it inspired me to go on and have a career that made a difference. I found that we grow out of pain. For a long time, I felt I had to be two people for my parents. Somehow, I felt I had to make up for the sibling who died."

And that experience is common to children who lose a brother or sister, Ms. Tatelbaum said. Thus, there are different types of grief as well as different styles, she said. Although the grieving process involves certain stages in all individuals, there are differences between grief of a parent for a lost child and grief of a child for a brother or sister, for example.

Most people either grieve openly and experience the feelings of loss and talk about the death, or choose a closed style of grief that can produce devastating emotional and physical results years later, according to Ms. Tatelbaum.

"Seeing my parents in that much pain when my brother died was very difficult for me," she recalled. "I became afraid to get close to people — especially men — because I was afraid I would lose them. I became quite depressed about life. It became a much more scary place.

"When a loss of that magnitude occurs, people sometimes are stuck with, 'Should I be open or not?' I know that expressing my grief has helped a lot."

One result of her ability to experience and express her grief openly has been the realization that the grieving process can be completed, and the bereaved person can lead a happy and full life. Publication of her book, for Ms. Tatelbaum, was one manifestation of this discovery.

"I found that you can complete the grieving process, and that you don't have to go on forever. Our society says that we need to grieve, but doesn't want us to grieve openly. I've found that you can grieve and complete the process.

"Often, you need to have an imaginary conversation with the person. We need to complete our resentments, our wishes, our dreams for the other person. It's a releasing process in which you say, 'Goodbye.' "

Much of this experience is shared in The Courage to Grieve, as well as practical suggestions for the bereaved and for friends and family members.

"There really aren't any great words for a person who is grieving," she said. "Just your physical presence is the greatest gift you can give. We should be willing to cry whenever the tears come up. Unexpressed grief just sits there like a time bomb, waiting to go off."

CARMEL VALLEY therapist and author Judy Tatelbaum asserts in her book The Courage to Grieve that suppressed grief can actually cause physical illness. Her popular book is to be released in paperback in September.

COMPLETION of the grieving process can be a profoundly moving and transitional experience, Ms. Tatelbaum said.

"Endings can be stepping stones to new beginnings," she said. "Losses open us up to some of the deeper issues that we wouldn't otherwise think about. I have come to believe there is life after death and that we are reincarnated. I know, too, that people who believe in life after death do better with the loss of a loved one."

Ms. Tatelbaum attended Syracuse University and the Simmons College School of Social Work in Boston. She has worked as a psychiatric social worker at the Payne Whitney Clinic of New York/Cornell Medical Center, the Columbia University School of Social Work, and the Massachussetts Mental Health Center.

Dr. Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, whose work with death and the dying has won her international acclaim, had this to say about The Courage to Grieve:

"An excellent and tactical, valid book on all the aspects of grief and grief resolution, including important ideas about self-help and avenues to finish unfinished business and teach people how to let go. It is a well done book written with wisdom and love, and makes people aware that every ending is also a new beginning."

Ms. Tatelbaum is a Gestalt, as opposed to Freudian, therapist. "Gestalt therapy is

Grieving requires courage, according to local author

feeling-oriented and in the present time. Freudian is past-oriented," she explained.

Despite her book and her interest in the grieving process, Ms. Tatelbaum said her practice in Carmel Valley is more general and not specifically geared to the bereaved.

"Only about 10 percent of my practice is with grief, although I would like it to be more," she said. Ms. Tatelbaum believes many more people could benefit by assistance toward total resolution of their grief.

"One of the biggest stresses in a marriage is to lose a child," she said. "The divorce rate after the loss of a child increases. It takes a strong couple to get through it. A lot of people feel very abandoned, and often their sexual needs are different.

"And we don't get a lot of support in grieving. People who are grieving tend to have low self-esteem. Often they don't know that you can see a therapist and get help."

THERE ARE other types of grief unrelated to death, such as grief following the loss of a marriage through divorce or separation, or the loss of a job, Ms. Tatelbaum said.

"The problem of separation and divorce in our society is one we're not sensitive to," she said. "In our society, the only acceptable way to separate is through anger. But it doesn't have to be that way."

The reality that death and the grieving process are still taboo subjects came vividly to light upon publication of her book, when the publisher decided not to promote it, and news media shied away from it.

"One radio station refused an interview because they said the subject was too much of a 'downer,' " Ms. Tatelbaum recalled.

Through her own loss and grief, Ms. Tatelbaum discovered that bereaved persons often feel a kinship with each other ("It's almost like a secret society."), and a sense of detachment from others who have not had similar experiences.

"You tend to gravitate toward people who have gone through the same kind of pain," she said. "And you often tend to look at others as children who haven't experienced much."

Some people manage to channel their grief into productive action and to complete the grieving process, Ms. Tatelbaum said. An example is the father of a young man killed by a drunk driver who placed his son's battered car on a trailer and drove around the state in a successful campaign to toughen laws against drunk drivers.

"Grieving always has the potential to open people up to greater things," she said. "It takes great courage to go back out and live and to go through what some people have had to go through, and to live 100 percent.

"The hardest thing for us to face is that we're not omnipotent. And the hardest thing for most doctors to face is that they may be unable to save a life. Doctors just aren't educated in grief and dying. I would really like the medical schools to educate doctors on grief."

Judy Tatelbaum said the summation of her experiences with death, grief and its resolution toward a full life can be simply stated.

"I think we're here to help others."

BUSINESS BEAT

BY FLORENCE MASON

Catching up with business

Marian Niculescu told the Carmel Business License Board he has been repairing clocks and watches for 27 years. "But then I started really early!" he quickly added.

Youthful-appearing Niculescu said that in Switzerland, where he learned his craft, clock and watch repairing are learned together. In the United States they are taught separately. So he will be doing both clock and watch repairs in his new business. He shares space with the Studio Jeweler in the Doud Arcade craft studio off San Carlos Street.

Niculescu has been in this country 10 years and in Carmel about three, during which time he worked with jeweler Henri Corbat. "I came here because I just love the place, and it's a very good place to do business," Niculescu said. He was given a friendly greeting by Sandy Swain, planning commission representative on the business license board, who said: "We sure do need you."

Niculescu, who is single, plays soccer and tennis. He is especially proud of his soccer team, the Monterey Peninsula Soccer Club, which he insists is "the best in the area."

IT'S A PLEASURE

When Carmel resident Gail Lehman goes to West Berlin in October, it will be a pleasure trip and also one directly related to her business as a planner and designer. She has been invited to participate in the seventh annual congress of the Union International des Femmes Architects, a worldwide organization of women architects and planners. Among the highlights will be an exhibition of Ms. Lehman's 1983 award-winning work.

Ms. Lehman submitted three projects to the organization as an overview of her work: a residence in Pebble Beach, a savings and loan facility in Beverly Hills and law offices in GAIL LEHMAN, award-winning designer, will be honored in West Germany.

Century City. Her entry earned a certificate "for excellence in interior design."

She lived in Carmel in 1969, then left the peninsula to work in Los Angeles. "There was more happening there in my field at that time," she explained. After living in southern California for seven years, however, Ms. Lehman returned to Carmel. "I do mostly commercial design," she said, "and there are more possibilities here now." Well-established in California, she now works nationally as well.

One of her local projects, just completed, was interior design for the Bayou Cafe, which opened on Sixth Avenue just two weeks ago. She also works "by the hour," which appeals especially to middle-income residents. "People may not want a major project," she explained. "This way, they can use our services just for a consultation, or to redecorate a single room."

THEY ARE STILL WITH US

Howard Sehlin has joined Don Nelson as an officer of the Monterey County Bank and will be in the Carmel Rancho office as Vice President — Customer Relations. Both men were officers with the National Bank of Carmel.

Sehlin has been a Carmel resident for many years. He had 34 years' experience with Crocker Bank before joining the National Bank of Carmel at its inception in 1980. He is a director of the Carmel Business Association and of the Red Cross as well as a past president of Carmel Rotary.

THERE'S NO SLOWDOWN HERE

Pat Parrish, new branch manager of Herma S. Curtis' Carmel office, doesn't see the recent rise in interest rates as bothering the real estate market, yet. "We had a fantastic last six months," she said. "I have some concern about the interest rate and the coming elections, but there hasn't been any slowdown as yet."

The Carmel office, on Dolores north of Ocean Avenue, specializes in Pebble Beach and Carmel properties. Pat has been with Herma Curtis Real Estate since 1977, after a career in teaching. She lives in Carmel and plays tennis — "You've got to mention that!" She has two children: Jamie, a student at Santa Catalina, and Michael, who goes to Briarcliff in Carmel.

SHE WAS RIGHT HERE

Planned Parenthood of Monterey County made a nationwide search for a new executive director, and found their top candidate right in their own organization. Carmel resident Carla Hanson was named to that position after serving as associate director and acting director. She replaces Rosann Wisman, who moved to Washington, D.C. as executive director of the Planned Parenthood office there.

Mrs. Hanson is now in charge of clinics in Salinas, Castroville, Seaside and Soledad as well as Monterey. Her new position involves all aspects of administration and management as well as fund-raising. The Monterey County Planned Parenthood affiliate was recently awarded an "outstanding" accreditation by the national organization.

Before her association with Planned Parenthood, Mrs. Hanson had been a businesswoman; with a background in public health, she had set up clinics in many countries.

A long-time Carmel resident, she lives with her husband, J. Peter Hanson, and three children who are still at home — two of them at Carmel High.

THERE GOES THE JUDGE

You won't see judicial robes flying, but you will see a number of local judges fleeing on foot in September. It's the annual California Judges' Association running race, scheduled for Sept. 24.

The race, open to judges and their families, will be staged at the Del Mar parking lot and will follow a course on San Antonio south to Ocean Avenue, then west on Ocean to Scenic Road and south to Carmel Point, returning to the parking area by the same route.

According to CJA spokesman Judge William Burleigh, this will be the eighth or ninth annual run. "It's a fun run," he said, "but there are sure to be prizes." Judge Burleigh added that Monterey County has one of the fleetest judges in the state. He is Maurice Jourdane, who narrowly lost a race of his own in the June election but will still be eligible to compete in the September event.

Reviewing plans for the race at a meeting of the Business License and Code Review Board, Asst. Police Chief Bob Fischer deadpanned: "They haven't been a problem in the past."

NOW WE KNOW WHERE IT IS

"Where's the beef?" Manager Tim Estall of the Butcher Shop in Carmel wants you to know that it is right there on Ocean Avenue at lunch time now, as well as for dinner. And not only beef in various forms, but fresh fish, omelets, salads, sandwiches and even a selection of "lite" lunches.

There are desserts, too, but we didn't get beyond this one on the menu: "Apple 'Brown' Betty, our own delicious pastry delight. A filling reminiscent of apple strudel, baked to order in a crock covered with a light puff pastry crust and special vanilla ice cream."

The decision to open the Butcher Shop from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., seven days a week, was made because so many people asked "Why not?" according to Estall. He has been manager of the local eatery for the past eight months, after working with Host Mariott in the San Francisco Bay area.

IT WILL BE MUCH THE SAME

A Utah-based not-for-profit corporation will be the new owner of Carmel's alcoholism and drug treatment center in September. St. Benedict's ACT had already acquired management of Brightside Carmel, which is on Valley Way off Highway 1.

According to Dennis Reese, Ph.D., ACT vice-president of clinical services, ACT will continue treatment "on the philosophical basis of Brightside." He said that ACT believes alcoholism and chemical dependency "are illnesses, and our mission is to provide hope for recovery to the dependent person and his or her family."

ACT's program includes an interdisciplinary approach for the care of the total person "including physical, emotional, social, psychological, financial and spiritual needs." The treatment program follows the principles of Alcoholics Anonymous and includes a two-year aftercare program.

St. Benedict's ACT is a subsidiary of St. Benedict's Health System. It operates treatment programs for adults and adolescents on an inpatient and outpatient basis in several western states.

WHAT'S NEW AT HIGHLANDS INN

Twenty-seven new deluxe "Spa Suites" overlooking the ocean will be available for guests at Highlands Inn early next month.

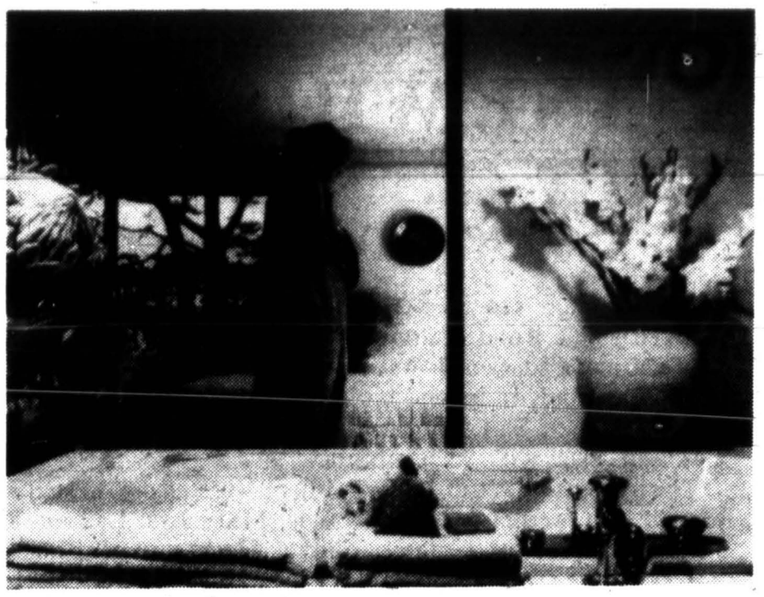
According to Toni Doyle, director of sales and marketing for the hotel, the new units will make a total of 77 accommodations introduced since January as part of the historic hotel's "redefinition." Eventually Highlands Inn will have 143 units clustered throughout its wooded hillside site.

"The new one- and two-bedroom units are called 'Spa Suites' because of the oversized hydromassage tub and spacious dressing areas in each master bath," Ms. Doyle said. Each has a wood-burning fireplace, outdoor balcony or deck with a view of the Pacific Ocean, and a fully appointed kitchen.

Many of the one-bedroom versions are all on one level, while some are in a bi-level "loft" style. Several of the new units will be two-bedroom suites, with each bedroom containing the luxurious spa-style bath and dressing area, with an especially fine view of the ocean.

TONY HECKMAN

She had only worked with the Carmel Business Association for a few months, but Tony Heckman will be missed. Association president Ellie Lester, obviously moved, asked for a moment of silence to honor Tony's memory at the beginning of the CBA June meeting.



ONE OF THE new spa suites available soon at Highlands Inn.

Tony was one of the CBA faithful volunteers until she died in her sleep from an apparent heart attack. Services were held in Long Beach, where her family lives.

THIS — AND THAT

Chateau Julien winery in Carmel Valley recently announced the start of a full-time wine education center, with courses from beginning to advanced. The classes, each of which covers a full day, are offered to the public and to industry-related personnel.

Fees for the classes range from $35 to $250 per person. The latter is for a two-day, in-depth exploration of the wines of Monterey County, with blind tasting, gourmet lunches and a multi-course gourmet dinner at the Chateau.

The present schedule runs through August, with one or two classes each week. Registration is open.

If you thought you saw a lot of tourists in our town in 1982, you did! Figures recently released by the U.S. Travel Data Center for that year show that California ranked first among all 50 states and the District of Columbia in terms of travel expenditures in 1982.

U.S. travelers spent nearly $24.7 billion in California that year, 3.0 percent more than in 1981. These expenditures generated nearly 512,000 jobs, 5.2 percent of total employment in the state.

Traveler spending also generated $888 million in state tax revenue, approximately 4.1 percent of all state tax collections in 1982.

Monterey County came in third in all those categories, after Los Angeles and San Francisco counties.

It is expansion time for Gibbs and Soell, Inc. Public Relations, with increases in both space and staff.

The company moved its California office from Eighth and San Carlos in Carmel to larger offices on Carmel Rancho Blvd. Manager Robert Rice also announced two additions to the Carmel staff.

One is Steve Wilson, who has transferred from the agency's headquarters in New York; he will serve as associate account supervisor here. Wilson is a journalism graduate of Kent State University who has been a freelance writer and spent seven years in public relations in New York City.

The second new member of the firm is a student intern, Frank Van Brocklin, a senior in Journalism at Cal Poly State University. Van Brocklin is a graduate of Salinas High School and a former student at Hartnell College.

Carmel-based Financial Marketing Corp. also announces two additions to its staff. They are Rolf Trautsch and Suzanne Seay.

Trautsch recently retired from the Air Force as a lieutenant colonel. He had been deputy director for training development and acting assistant dean for instruction at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey.

Suzanne Seay spent six years as a publishers' representative for American educational publishers in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Before that she taught in schools in the United States and abroad for 13 years.

Carmelite wins match

With a high score of 3,790 points, Audrey Schrader of Yankee Point Road, Carmel, won the championship of the first Carmel Crossword Classic on July 4.

Close behind, in second and third places respectively, were Mark Ryder of San Francisco and Mary Jane Hawkinson of Oakland, each with 3,650 points.

The remaining "top ten" finishers were Rose Lester and Gerald T. Owens of Carmel Valley, Mary Ann Lawson and Russell Gifford of Carmel, Shirley Heymann of Phoenix, Ariz., Diana Cooper of Santa Cruz, and Mary C. Neal of Pacific Grove.

Tournament director Joseph Pagano of Carmel Valley, also president of the sponsoring American Crossword Federation, announced that the success of the Carmel Crossword Classic is certain to attract attention to crossword competitions.

"We have taken the first step in matching East Coast states for crossword laurels," he said, and explained that the Carmel Classic was the first major crossword tournament ever held in the West. "And we will soon see whether or not the suggestion of a state-wide competition in California can become a reality."

HELP FOR DIABETIC CHILDREN

"Allison the Diabetic Doll" is now used to teach injection and blood glucose monitoring techniques to diabetics.

The doll is used primarily for children with diabetes, according to Cindy Onufer, R.N., patient educator at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. "The whole family is involved in the education process when a child is diagnosed with diabetes," says Onufer. "But it's very important for the child to learn to deal with the difficulties of being a diabetic on his own as soon as possible."

Markings that indicate appropriate places for insulin injections have been tattooed on the doll's abdomen, arms, legs and buttocks. She wears a Medic-Alert tag around her neck and a tube of instant glucose in her belt.

The doll is not only used to show how and where to make daily insulin injections, she is also used to help teach the latest diabetes monitoring technique — capillary blood glucose monitoring — which is done with a home monitoring kit or meter, and by taking blood from the fingertips. The child with diabetes might need to perform this test several times a day, according to Onufer.

"Allison" also serves as a tool for the psychological growth of the diabetic child, says Onufer. "With the doll they can do some role-playing," she says, "which helps them walk through some of their fears and deal with the other emotions about having diabetes."

The doll was created by Peggy Owens-Lee, a recent graduate of the Hartnell School of Nursing.

SCOUTS CRUISE WITH NAVY

Eleven scouts from Carmel's Boy Scout Troop 3 and one Cub Scout from Carmel's Pack 48 were guests of the Navy aboard the U.S.S. San Bernardino on a cruise from Stockton to Monterey.

The ship traveled down the Delta, along the Sacramento River, under the Golden Gate Bridge and approximately 50 miles out to sea before anchoring in Monterey Bay. The U.S.S. San Bernardino visited Monterey in connection with Sloat Day.

The U.S.S. San Bernardino (Landing Ship Tank-1189), under command of Capt. Pieter K. Van Winkle, is a modern Super LST commissioned March 27, 1971. It is capable of transporting Navy and U.S. Marine Corps equipment and of supporting more than 500 men in amphibious assault. Capt. Van Winkle spent two years in Monterey while attending the Naval Postgraduate School.

Scouts embarking on the voyage were Conrad Lindgren, Jeff Williams, John Hardin, Jeffrey Fenton, Chris Paskevicz, Vince Hake, Lars Lindgren, Miguelin Dominguez, Sean McKeown and Colin Braudrick. The Cub Scout was Jason Lindgren. The scouts were accompanied by Art and Van Crego.

Arrangements for the trip were made by the public relations office of the Naval Postgraduate School and Committee Chairman Richard Self.

The airman will now receive specialized training instruction in fire protection.

LOCAL RIDERS TRIUMPHANT

Southern California's finest riders were left in the dust last week as four Monterey Peninsula equestrians rode off with the most coveted medals at Rancho Murieta's Equine Complex Classic in Sacramento.

The four winners, all Rushwood Riding School students, were Patty Stumbaugh, Vanessa Klettke, Denize Borges, and Keirith Snyder.

Miss Stumbaugh, riding her hunter, Dragon Wings, won the Children's Amateur/Adult Hunter Classic. Not only was Miss Stumbaugh one of the youngest riders to compete in the grueling two-round event, but she topped 44 riders of all ages.

Miss Stumbaugh, on her jumper, Flight Instructor, was named Reserve Show Champion Children's Jumper for age 17 and under and won the Children's Jumper event for age 17 and under. Riding two of her points, Mary's Mikado and Mary's Bell, she won the Welsh Pony Hunter event and took first in Pony Equitation Over Fences for age 17 and under.

Miss Klettke and her hunter, Kare Fre Victory, won the American Horse Show Association Junior Hunt Seat Medal, and she was named Show Champion Limit Junior Hunter for ages 14 and under after winning Limit Hunter for ages 14 and under. She placed first in Equitation Over Fences for ages 14 and under and in other medal competition she came in second in the ASPCA-McClay Hunt Seat Medal and received a fourth in the United States Equestrian team medal.

Miss Snyder, riding her horse Stuntman, won sixth in the ASPCA-McClay Hunt Seat Medal and placed second in the Open Equitation event for ages 15-17.

More than 700 horses were entered in the competition which featured jumps of four feet six inches and entries of 50-plus riders per event.

CORRECTION

The Gazebo still is open and doing business in its seventh year.

That is the word from Nell and Bob Meyer, owners of The Gazebo in the Court of the Fountains, west side of Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

It seems that many of their friends, customers and even their bank were alarmed over the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook "Business Beat" and accompanying photograph that reported Robert Cordy will open an antique shop in "the gazebo."

What a difference a capital letter and one word can make.

Cordy actually is opening in "a gazebo" (lower case g) formerly occupied by Robert Fenton Appraisers.

The Gazebo, which is in one of the two gazebos in The Court of the Fountains, remains open offering unique gifts.

Supervisors clear roadblock over Stillwater Cove access

A RELUCTANT Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday afternoon cleared the Stillwater Cove access roadblock that has stalled adoption of the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program.

However, a new controversy has emerged that threatens the apparent settlement over a provision in the LCP that requires limited public access to the Stillwater Cove beach, just south of the Beach and Tennis Club.

Supervisors delayed until July 24 a hearing on a proposed agreement between the county and Pebble Beach Co. that is to be incorporated into the local coastal program.

The legally-binding agreement requires Pebble Beach Co. to enforce strict residential development standards, support more open space, continue security and forestry protection, and establish a community advisory board of residents to cooperate on policy matters in the forest.

Supervisors delayed adoption of the agreement as part of the LCP because there were several changes made to the document before the afternoon hearing. And most Pebble Beach residents had not had a chance to review the proposed agreement.

There also may be a rift between supervisors and Pebble Beach Co. over whether the Del Monte Property Owners group should be a legal party to the contract. Supervisors appear willing to support the property owners, but Pebble Beach officials are cool to that stipulation.

If the agreement is approved next Tuesday, the local coastal progam probably will come before the Coastal Commission in September.

The Coastal Commission continually has insisted that the document include a provision for public access to the private Stillwater Cove Beach.

Supervisors once again expressed their reluctance to approve public access to the beach. Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City voted against the limited access plan.

The standing-room-only audience in supervisors' chambers appeared united in the opinion that there should be no public access at all to Stillwater Cove.

However, speakers appeared to be divided about the compromise in the LCP. Some wanted to take a hard "no access" stand to the Coastal Commission. Others hesitantly endorsed the limited access compromise for fear the Coastal Commission would require even more access if the compromise is denied by supervisors.

SUPERVISORS — save for Petrovic — agreed with the latter point.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley suggested that the board adopt the limited access policy and get the LCP approved.

Because the access plan does not have to be enacted for two years, supervisors can propose an amendment to the LCP to further restrict public access to Stillwater Cove, Peters said.

As it stands now, the draft local coastal program will allow up to 50 visitors a day on the southern portion of the beach. The beach north of the pier remains private for beach club members.

There will be six parking spaces in the beach club lot reserved for visitors. Parking lots by the tennis club will no longer be reserved for members. Parking there will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

A ramp is to be built for the launching of small craft. The number of scuba divers also will be restricted.

The access plan has been assailed because of residents' concerns that the beach is too small and environmentally fragile to support 50 visitors. Enforcement and parking problems will multiply, opponents argue.

Another alternative plan not approved would have allowed public access only to the pier.

HAPPY HOUR 4 TO 6

California Rodeo spells 'Big Week' in Salinas

BULL-TOSSED cowboys and high-tailing clowns, barbecued beef and horse parades, all tossed together in a lettuce-rich town called Salinas — that's the California Rodeo.

Classified locally as "The Big One," the California Rodeo is otherwise recognized as one of the "Big Four" outdoor rodeos of the world, along with Cheyenne, Pendleton and Calgary. And Thursday, July 19 through Sunday, July 22, tenderfeet can thrill to the spectacle of bronc ridin' and ropin' and other rodeo staples without tasting a single dirt clod.

The California Rodeo is actually Salinas' excuse to promote a full roster of rip-roarin' activities under the banner of Big Week. A cowboy-hatted Miss California Rodeo was selected Wednesday, July 18. Following is a schedule of other Big Week goings on:

- Roundup Day Barbecue: Thursday, July 19 will kick off the opening performance of the California Rodeo with a steak barbecue at the Rodeo Grounds, 1034 N. Main St. Live western music, a chance to meet the cowboys who will compete that afternoon and cocktails distinguish the barbecue, served 10:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Roundup day barbecue tickets are $17 and include lunch, a rodeo seat and parking.
- Western Art Show and Sale: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday through Sunday, the Salinas Community Center on North

Annual Champion Spark Plug 200

Cyclists hit 'Seca

TOP MOTORCYCLISTS will test their skills and machines at Laguna Seca Raceway this weekend in the 13th Annual Champion Spark Plug 200, part of the Camel Pro Series National Championships.

Scheduled Saturday and Sunday, July 21 and 22, these races could go a long way toward settling at least two of the five national championships contested in the "pavement division" of the Camel Pro Series.

The Champion Spark Plug 200 is for Formula One class motorcycles, run in a pair of 100 kilometer heats. Mike Baldwin of Stamford, Conn. is the point leader in that division, looking for a repeat of his 1983 national championship. He leads Wes Cooley of Ramona, by a healthy margin, but will need a strong finish at Laguna Seca to strengthen his position.

One slip, spill or mechanical failure in motorcycle racing and a championship hope can quickly go up in smoke. Also in the thick of the battle for the national title are Doug Brauneck of Macon, Ga., Nick Richichi of Flushing, N.Y. and Rich Schlachter of Old Lyme, Conn. They are within 20 points of Baldwin, who posted wins at Louden, N.H. and Road America this season.

Baldwin will also have his hands full with

Youthful ears attune to classical melodies

AN ORCHESTRA that includes "a balloon or two" and "piano five hands" are ingredients designed to tantalize youthful ears during the Concert for Young Listeners at 2 p.m. Tuesday, July 24 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

The concert, which proves there is room for comedy in a Bach Festival, is geared specifically to the younger set.

It has been a part of the Carmel Bach Festival for approximately 15 years, according to festival Development Director Alice Kinsler.

The musical menu for the hour-long program is selected, as is the entire Bach Festival repertoire, by festival Music Director and Conductor Sandor Salgo. His wife, Priscilla Salgo, conducts the Festival Chorale that is a major part of the Concert for Young Listeners.

"We're doing a very fun thing," Mrs. Salgo said. The 32-member Festival Chorale will perform works by P.D.Q. Bach, the mythical "child of Bach" who really is contemporary composer Peter Schickele.

"We're doing the Liebeslieder Polkas. This P.D.Q. Bach is very tongue-in-cheek. It's a takeoff on Brahms' Liebeslieder Waltzes," Mrs. Salgo explained.

Foot-stomping bluegrass plays Forest Theater

WESTERN Pacific Blue Grass Band will make its third appearance at the Outdoor Forest Theater Sunday Afternoon Concert Series at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 22. The concert is free.

Known as the Bear Creek Boys from 1970 to 1979, the band changed its name following the addition of a female bass player and an evolution of musical style. The special appeal of this band lies in its performances of classic country songs by such artists as Hank Williams and Bob Wills, as well as hard-driving bluegrass sounds of Bill Monroe and Flatt and Scruggs.

The band has performed at the Great American Music Hall in San Francisco, the Gilroy Garlic Festival, the Golden West Bluegrass Festival in Marin County and the Malibu Canyon Bluegrass Jamboree.

Western Pacific was also featured in the Domaine Chandon Summer Concert Series at Yountville and served as an opening act at the Paul Masson Vintage Sounds series.

Bring a picnic lunch and enjoy the talents of the Western Pacific Blue Grass Band.

LARKIN HOUSE SET PATTERN

The Larkin House on the corner of Calle Principal and Jefferson, Monterey, built in the 1830s, set the pattern for what became known as "Monterey" architecture, a blend of Thomas Oliver Larkin's New England building designs and native California construction.

FIRST CHURCH WAS EPISCOPAL

Although Pacific Grove was founded as a methodist retreat, the first church building was for an Episcopalian congregation, St. Mary's-by-the-Sea. It had such a pleasing design that when the time came to enlarge it, rather than add onto it awkwardly the decision was made to cut it in half across the middle move the two halves apart and elongate the building.

RANDY MAMOLA of Santa Clara, currently third in world point standings, takes a corner on his Suzuki. Mamola will compete in the weekend races at Laguna Seca Raceway, July 21 and 22.

the American contingent returning from Europe's Formula One scene. They include defending World Champion Freddie Spencer of Shreveport, La., and Santa Clara's Randy Mamola. That Honda-mounted duo currently stands second and third in the World points.

Joining them all, for what is rumored to be his final ride, is "the King," Kenny Roberts of Modesto, the three-time World title winner.

In the Bell Superbike Classic, Fred Merkel of Stockton has a very solid lead over former Formula Two national champion Sam McDonald of Sapulpa, Okla. The spread is currently 96-75, but should "Flying Fred" lose an engine this weekend, and should McDonald step into victory lane, the count would be 96-95.

In the Formula Two wars, Chris Steward of Los Angeles and Santa Monica's Dave Busby are locked in a real struggle for the national crown. Steward has 54 points, to Busby's 49. Tracy DeMuro of Canoga Park, Don Greene of Novato and Joey Sommers are also in the hunt with more than 40 points each.

There is a division for twin cylinder machines, called Battle of the Twins, and that is what the Grand Prix portion of that group has become with Gene Church of Turnersburg, N.C. holding a two-point lead over Harry Klinzmann of Garden Grove. And although Canadian teams stand 1-2-3 in sidecar points, the title in that division is still a long way from being decided.

The weekend, with the Bell Superbike Classic as the Saturday attraction, shapes up as the biggest motorsport event in Northern California history. Tickets are still on sale at BASS and Ticketron outlets.

Added features this year are a vintage motorcycle parade at noon Saturday, a vintage motorcycle show in the Harbor Area just outside the paddock both days, and finals of the Vetter High Mileage Contest on Sunday.

Laguna Seca Raceway is located off Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas. Camping is available on a first-come, first-served basis at $7 per night (Friday and Saturday) and $9 per night for other vehicles.

Races begin at 9 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday. The Bell Superbike Classic will get the green flag at 3 p.m. The first segment of the Champion Spark Plug 200 will be flagged off at 1 p.m. Sunday.

For additional information or ticket requests, call the Laguna Seca office, 373-1811. It is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Main Street will be the site of a western art exhibition and sale.

- Historical exhibition: Saddles and spurs, hats and chaps and other novelties that date from the first California Rodeo in 1911 can be viewed at the Community Center.
- Daily horse parade: 12:30 p.m., approximately 1,000 equines stroll through central Salinas.
- Square dancing: 8 p.m. Friday, July 20, at the Salinas Armory. The event is free.
- Colmo del Rodeo Parade: This night-lighted float parade traverses downtown Salinas starting at 8 p.m. Saturday, July 21.

The competitive events staged there make the California Rodeo the richest four-day performance event of its kind in the world. It is the only one to offer every cowboy a head of stock and a chance to win money every day if the number of entries permits. Last year the purse money amounted to more than $230,000.

Simultaneously with the cowboy contests, races, horse show events and contract acts are presented on the track which circles the arena. The California Rodeo is noted especially for its trick riders and clowns as well as its Thoroughbred racing events. Plans for the 1984 rodeo include the mare and foal race, the wild horse race, barrel racers, wild cow milking and a pageant of flags.

The first California Rodeo was presented in 1911 as an intermission Wild West Show during the trotting races. By 1913 the trotters were gone and the California Rodeo was termed "The Big One." Except during World War II, it has been presented every year.

Ticket prices for the 1984 California Rodeo range from $5 to $9 for grandstand seats, and arena seats are $12. Tickets are available through the California Rodeo, 1034 N. Main St., Salinas, or call 424-7355. They can also be purchased at the following ticket outlets: BASS; Neil Thrams Box Office, Oakland; San Jose Box Office and Peninsula Box Office.

The Dining Room

The California Repertory Theatre presents The Dining Room by A.R. Gurney. Made up of moving, touching and funny vignettes, the play takes place in an elegant dining room over a period of 50 years.

The story traces the history of a modern family and brings to light the decline of gracious living as one generation passes on to another. The space and character of the dining room undergo changes as do the lives of the people who inhabit it.

It is a play of memories — some clear and distinct as if they happened yesterday and some fuzzy as if recalled years later and tainted by the passage of years.

The cast includes Jarion Monroe, Michael Flynn, Dana Kelly, Karen Lamb, Susan Hegarty and Jean Gilpin.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday, July 21, 22 and 25. CalRep is at 125 Ocean View Blvd., Pacific Grove. For reservations, call 372-4373.

Seascape artist honored with one-man tribute

THE ANNUAL one-man tribute to landscape artist Eugene Garin at the Simic Galleries in Carmel is embellished this year with the opening of a new gallery on Sixth Avenue near San Carlos in Carmel.

This newest gallery joins the two original Simic locations on San Carlos near Sixth in presenting the largest selection of seascapes in the nation.

Eugene Garin is a native of Odessa in the Soviet Union, and was reared there during the Lenin and Stalin regimes. With the encouragement of his father, Garin began painting at the age of five. He later studied under Professor Peter Efremovich Fedotov at the Odessa Art School.

Turbulent years were spent in a German forced-labor camp during World War II, followed by escape and eventual freedom in Argentina, where Garin became a leading artist in Buenos Aires.

Considered to be the originator of the double transparent wave, which he terms the Garin Wave, Garin for many years has studied the movement of the sea and the free run of an untameable surf along the shore.

Garin's trademark stormy seascapes and dramatic shipwrecks punctuate this exhibit. For more information about this show, call Simic Galleries, 624-7522.

Bleich: Evolution of an Impressionist Painter

Why did a nationally known, American impressionist from Carmel spend so much time and energy in France during much of 1982 and 1983? George Bleich, a Pebble Beach resident known for the luminosity and vibrant harmony of his American scenes, had a simple answer: "Inspiration." The spring of 1983 was exhilarating. Returning to Venice, capturing on canvas the magical, atmospheric light on the canals, then on to the south of France.

"On my second trip to France in '83, while painting in Giverny, I had time to reminisce how my work evolved. It was a wonderful experience to be sitting in Monet's boat painting the beauty around the pond and traveling back fifteen years in time. To think of the many unique experiences found painting out of doors; the wave that took my painting and easel away at Pt. Lobos; the brush that broke off in my hand while painting on showshoes in subfreezing temperatures in New Hampshire; documenting the sea claiming the freighter Nefelli off the Cornish coast of England; the gentle pleasure of wildflowers in Carmel Valley and Yosemite; the warmth of pink sand and Bermuda sun.

"My fifteen years of painting on location in this country and abroad have led to a sensitivity in my response to color and form in nature constantly changed by time and the elements. People have inquired why go to France and Europe for inspiration and study. The answer is for the same reason Homer, Sargent, Cassatt, Whistler, Hassam, Twachtman and many others did, for personal growth.

"As a sensitive in love with life and art I can speak honestly of the exciting influences of France. The thrilling art changes that took place in France encourage personal innovations. The gardens and studios of the art heroes of France have been preserved providing a legacy of life for contemplation and inspiration. The great impressionists and post impressionists become your contemporaries when you paint at locations they shared with each other. Experiencing Aix-en-Provence was like hiking and painting with Cezanne. Complexities become more understandable."

Renoirs, a warm sunlit oasis, inspired pastoral landscapes accented by irises, roses and olive trees. A city official, associated with the Cannes Art Festival, warmly welcomed the Bleichs by telling them "it is special to have an American impressionist here, painting at Renoirs."

Bleich places major importance on his work on coalescing the truth found in nature with the expressive power of human emotions. "After leaving Arles, painting in St. Remy was a transcendental experience of inner peace," said Bleich. "The harmony of the place flowed naturally through your mind's eye onto the canvas. This special comforting spirit of the place offered Van Gogh solace in the past." The emotional impact of Van Gogh's letters to Theo leave an indelible impression when read in Arles and St. Remy.

"My total commitment to quality in the fine arts has resulted in extensive art history research. Museums and the creative environs of the masters have been and will be a continuing source of inspiration and knowledge. A background in understanding design, scientific color theory and phenomena plays an important role in my work. The truth of the formularized approach of Signac and the divisionist color theories become more apparent in St. Tropez as did the need of the freedom of the Fauves. Out of every discipline comes creative freedom.

"Currently I am combining an understanding of old master luminousity with the spontaneity of the impressionists. Post impressionists' color theories are used with natural rhythmic daubs of pigment that are more feeling and emotionally oriented. The high emotional energy level generated in my creative processes transcends natural fatigue so that is is not uncommon for me to continue painting through the night into the morn, for the sheer joy of it.

"The world I create is a reality, tempered by the inner vision and harmony of the mind's eye.

"As an artist grows older, his sight may grow weaker but his vision grows stronger."

As a painter I am fortunate to have such a wise and wonderful wife. As an artist I am a child excited by each new day and experience, allowing my colors to sing songs of my feelings for the world. I need guidance and direction, Kathy provides mine, a compass, a star to steer by. Our home is my harbor, and the joy we share with our children, Harry Eric and Christopher Orion, ages seven and nine, color my paintings with happiness."

Knowledgable collectors who own old masters, French and early American impressionists, including Renoirs and Monets, value highly the work of George J. Bleich in their collections. They feel his career is an ascending one, predicated on continuous growth and creative exploration. They see parallels to the evolving expressive range development of Turner, Pissaro and Monet, in color handling and luminosity. A sense of deep space and emotional symbolism projects his future works. An art historian on Monet's and Bleich's work Giverny: "They both exhibit a sensitive eye for color and harmony but Bleich's work is more articulate and panoramic, suggesting a feeling of wonder and serenity, while Monet's was more powerful and abstract."

Bleich, born in Philadelphia, Pa. in 1936, went to sea at the age of 15,, following the footsteps of his father, a merchant marine sea captain missing in action in 1942. Sailing professionally for 12 years and seven more years of owning his own yawl provided Bleich with knowledge and depth for his subsequent paintings of the sea and coastlines. Bleich acquired early respect as one of America's leading marine artists with President Ford accepting a major 30" x 40" painting, "Windhovering," while in the White House. The majesty and competency of his Sierra Mountain scenes led to an artist-in-residency in Yosemite National Park, in the studio of Thomas Hill, the great 19th century painter. In spring, Bleich's paintings ring with colorful praise of Carmel's abundant wildflowers.

In Giverny, France, George Bleich painting in Monet's boat. The fall of 1983 found Bleich once again along the Seine river from Paris to Honfleur. He spent more than 10 days at Giverny preparing studies for a major triptych of Monet's pond. The high point was a day spent painting in Monet's boat on the pond. Bleich said, "I was probably the first artist since Monet to use his bateau this way, although I must confess I felt wonderful, like a youthful Huck Finn, embarking on a great creative adventure."

At Bleich Gallery you will experience art, positively charged with the warmth of the sun. Paintings filled with the light and life of an artist sharing his love for the world. Paintings at Bleich West in Carmel and Bleich East in Gloucester, Mass., reflect a distinctively American approach to painting gardens of the masters such as Monet's in Giverny, Renoir's in Cagnes-sur-Mer and Cezanne's in Aix-en-Provence.

To fully appreciate the timeless beauty and serenity of Bleich's paintings, visit his Carmel Gallery on Dolores south of Ocean. Telephone (408) 372-2717 or 624-9447.

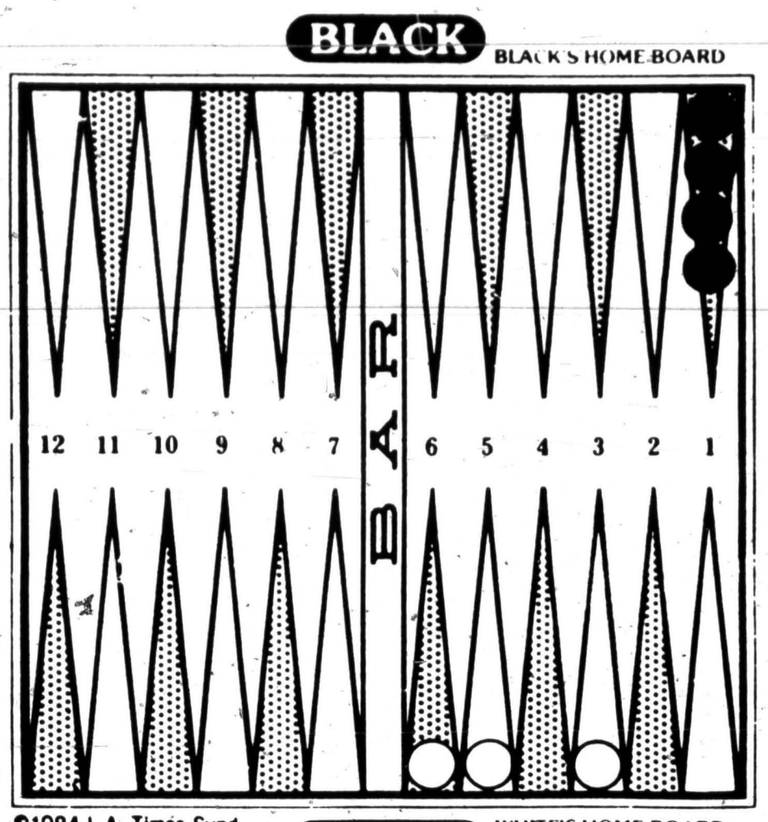
BACKGAMMON

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

SHOULD YOU DOUBLE?



You are White, and it is your turn to roll. Should you double? Or should you just roll?

Just roll.

Your chance to win is microscopically better than Black's. If you don't double, you might win a point more than Black in 100 games of this kind.

The trouble with doubling is that Black will redouble whenever your first roll is a bad one. You will probably accept the double, and you'll wind up losing a fair number of 4-point games.

For example, suppose you roll 2-1. You bear off the man from your 3-point, leaving men on your 6-point and 5-point. Black will redouble, and your only chance to win is that Black will not roll a doublet and that you will roll 6-6, 5-5, 4-4, 3-3, 6-5 or 5-6. The odds are 31 to 5 that you will lose, and you should resign if you have good sense.

You aren't much better off if you roll 3-1 or 3-2, and some other horrors.

Just roll the dice and hope for a decent enough number to keep Black's fingers off the doubling cube.

Bamboo extolled in silk painting

STREAMS AND Rocks in the Bamboo Groves, a 17th Century Chinese scroll painting recently acquired by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, will continue on display at the Museum through Sept. 5.

This ink on silk composition, completed by Zhu Sheng (Chu Sheng) in the winter of 1685, is "an excellent example of the myriad examples of bamboo that he did," Museum Trustee Robert Skiles explained.

Some of those examples were printed in The Mustard Seed Garden Manual, first published in 1679 and, according to Michael Sullivan, author of A Short History of Chinese Art, "still used as a technical handbook by Chinese artists and students today."

"He was a technician and a scholar," but he has not been well known among many Western collectors up to this time, Skiles remarked. "The reason they're available now is they've been collected by the scholars who wrote about it. They collected him because of the quality of his work, not because he was popular."

"Although this painter is not as well known as others, more studies are being done of him and he's coming to the forefront as a painter of experience."

The addition of the scroll to the Museum's permanent collection of Asian art is part of an ongoing effort to collect and preserve samples of Asian art, according to Museum Director Thomas J. Logan. Plans are currently underway to redesign the Museum's Asian Gallery and reopen it with objects from that permanent collection.

"We are pleased to have this work and hope that we may have additional funds for similar purposes in the future," Logan said.

"The Museum is continuing to grow during our Silver Anniversary Year. This growth, however, can only continue with the participation of our members and those in the community who have not yet been made aware of what the museum does."

Tickets available for festival

SINGLE tickets are available for the 1984 Cabrillo Music Festival, featuring Ralph Towner, Keith Jarrett and festival music director Dennis Russell Davies. They can be purchased at the Cabrillo College Community Services ticket office, 6500 Soquel Drive, Aptos. The festival will take place Aug. 16-26 in locations throughout Santa Cruz County and in San Juan Bautista.

The annual "Fiesta Day" concerts in San Juan Bautista have already sold out to season subscribers, as has the Aug. 19 appearance of Keith Jarrett playing Mozart's Piano Concerto in A Major.

Only a handful of tickets remain for Jarrett's Aug. 24 performance of Australian composer Peggy Glanville-Hicks' Etruscan Concerto and for the Aug. 25 recital with Dennis Russell Davies at the piano and festival concertmaster Romuald Tecco on violin.

Those interested in attending either of these concerts are encouraged to purchase tickets early.

Under the direction of conductor Dennis Russell Davies, the Cabrillo Music Festival is widely recognized as one of the most notable festivals in the country. Newsweek has hailed it as "arguably America's most innovative music festival" and Time has ranked it one of the six best small music festivals in the United States.

Tickets for the 12 concerts of the 1984 season are $11 to $15. For a complete concert schedule, call 476-9064.

Protect your teeth for life

Your teeth are meant to last all of your life. Although, like other parts of the human body, they are susceptible to disease and may need treatment, they will last if you follow these six steps to dental health.

1. Brush and floss thoroughly at least once a day.
2. Brush after meals when you can.
3. Eat sugar-containing foods only with your meals.
4. Avoid snacks and beverages between meals.
5. Use fluorides daily.
6. Get regular dental checkups.

Tooth decay is an ongoing process. The process begins with plaque, a sticky, colorless layer of harmful bacteria that is constantly forming in your mouth.

Certain bacteria found in plaque use the sugars you eat (especially sucrose, ordinary table sugar) to form acids. Plaque holds these acids against the tooth surface. Each time acid is produced, it attacks the tooth enamel for approximately 20 minutes.

After repeated acid attacks, the enamel is broken down and becomes decayed. Decay eventually progresses toward the center of the tooth. If decay is not treated and it reaches the pulp, an abscess forms at the root end. When this happens, the tooth becomes painful. At this point, the tooth will require endodontic (root canal) treatment. Without treatment, the tooth will have to be removed.

Proper shoes necessary in aerobic dancing

Aerobic dance has been increasing in popularity since it first came into vogue in 1969. This versatile routine combines a cardiovascular workout with exercise designed to improve flexibility, endurance, agility and coordination. And as with any sport, proper footcare is a must for maximum gain.

The foot takes an incredible pounding in a typical aerobic routine. Injuries can include stress fractures, and, in some cases, Achilles tendonitis.

The proper shoe is very important in aerobic dancing. The American Podiatry Association cautions against running shoes, as they do not provide the lateral support specifically needed for the activity.

Tennis or court shoes are more appropriate. There are also new aerobic dance shoes which are designed for precisely the types of movement an aerobic dancer goes through. Any shoe, however, is better than no shoe at all.

The American Podiatry Association suggests certain features in an aerobic shoe. The shoe should include lateral support rhough the arch and midfoot, toe guards for added protection and a light midsole.

Gum rubber soles provide enough traction for most aerobic surfaces while protecting wood floors. Nylon mesh means a very light and cool shoe.

Shop for shoes late in the day when your feet are larger. Put on the socks or leotard you plan to wear in class, and make sure there is enough room in the shoe — a thumb's width at the end and a "pinch" over the toe area.

And finally, the American Podiatry Association advises the exerciser to have any pre-existing foot problems taken care of before beginning the aerobics program. Healthy, pain-free feet can make your workouts less of a chore and more fun.

Look for good wherever you can find it!

TO ACHIEVE a breakthrough in comfort for feet, Birkenstock studied feet — standing, stepping and walking feet.

From those studies came the famous Birkenstock cork footbed, designed to duplicate the yielding properties of natural ground — a breakthrough in comfort!

Birkenstocks come in a wide variety of styles and colors, women's sizes 4-11 and men's sizes 7-15. Visit the first Birkenstock store to open in America, located in the Paseo Court, between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel, 624-5779.

Skin care for men equally important

There is no sex difference in skin. Other than being slightly thicker and needing a daily shave, a man's skin is the same as a woman's. If a man wants to avoid wrinkles, he'd better start using what women have been using for years, regardless of what it's called. Skindeep offers facials for men: a steaming, deep cleansing extraction, and a moisturizing massage of the skin.

Anne Vigliotti is a licensed esthetician and owner of Skindeep, located in the Clocktower Building in Carmel Rancho. Miss Vigliotti has some suggestions for men concerned about their skin:

— Stay out of the sun. If you like being in the sun, use the same sunblocks, creams, or screens women use depending on how fair or dark your skin is.

— Thoroughly clean your skin.

— When shaving, clean your face first with a cleansing lotion, then splash warm water on your face to open pores and soften skin. For less irritation and fewer ingrown hairs, don't stroke any area more than twice.

—Get a professional facial at least a few times a year at Skindeep, 624-4824.

THE FRIENDLY, knowledgeable staff at Cornucopia Health Food Store includes (from left): Dottie, Jon, Maggie, Bill and Jennifer. Plan a stop at this complete store where you can do all of your grocery shopping, including items such as natural fruit juices, dried fruit, organic produce, bulk foods, natural cheeses, spices, herbs and raw dairy products, too. HEALTH & FITNESS

Americans choosing healthy living and eating patterns

America has built health and fitness into its lifestyle. The evidence is all around us — from the number of health clubs springing up across the country — to the new "lighter" food choices in supermarkets and restaurants.

Restaurants have made great strides in giving the health-conscious customer food that he wants. Fast food chains, in fact, are in the forefront of responding to our changing eating habits.

The Ponderosa Steakhouse, for example, a family restaurant chain with locations nationwide, features a 30-foot-long salad buffet with items ranging from typical salad ingredients to more unusual items like alfalfa sprouts and sunflower seeds.

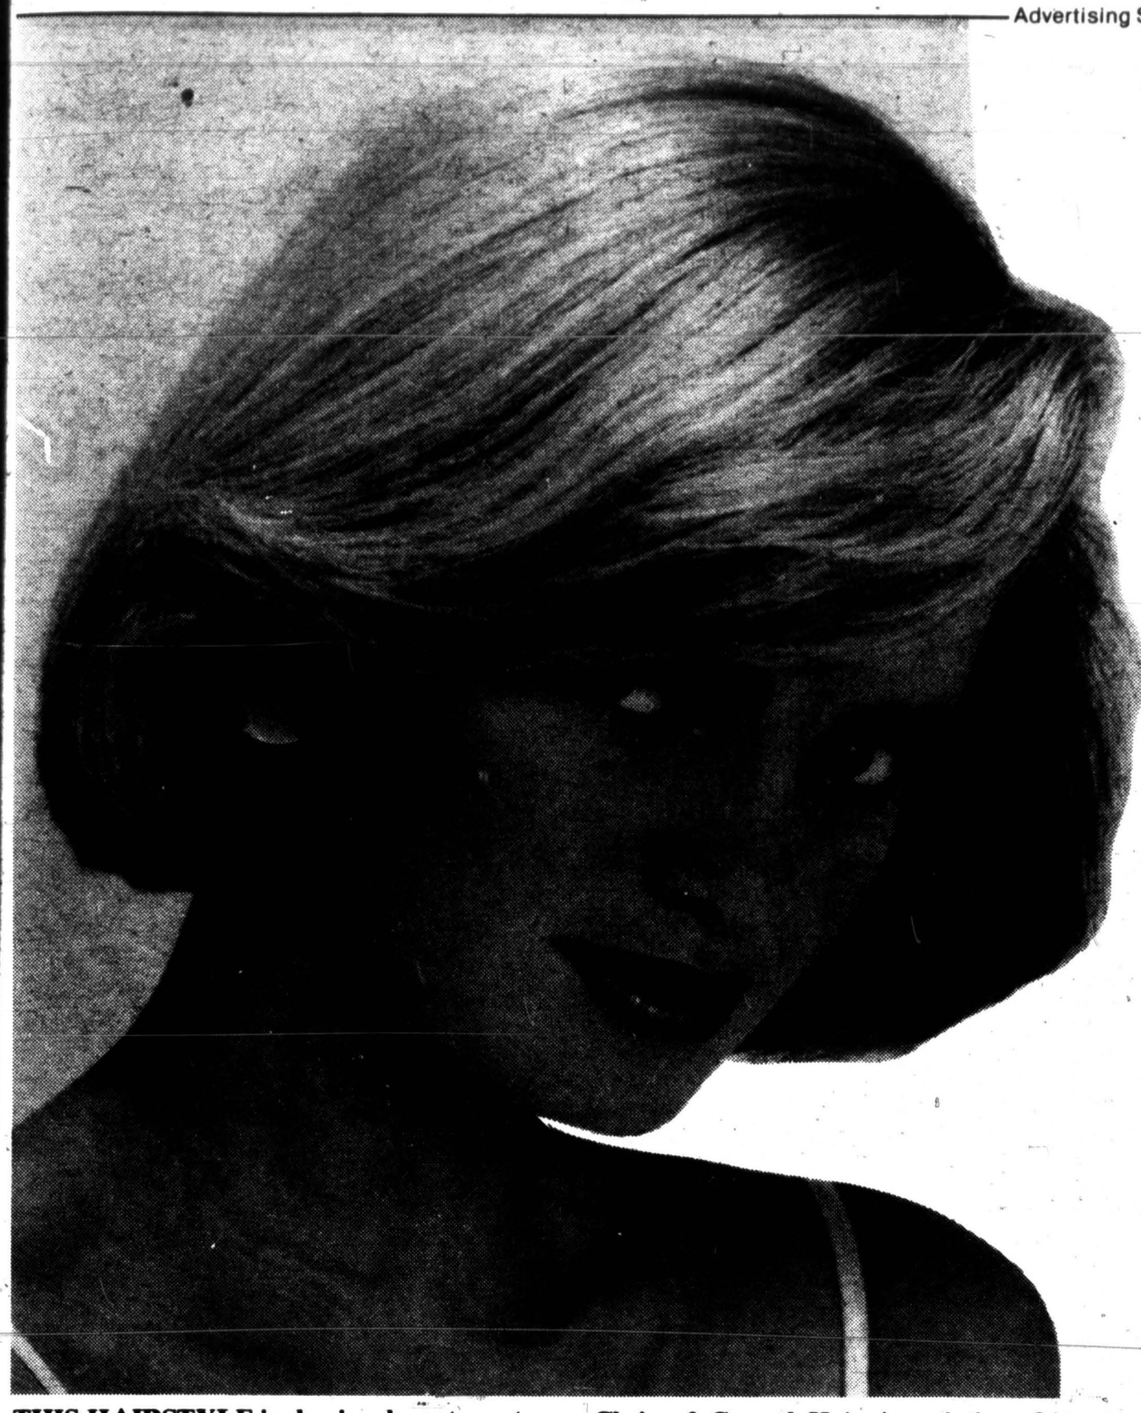
With so many choices, salad buffs can create a wide range of meals. Ponderosa estimates that more than 2,349,060 salads can be built using combinations of just five of the more than 50 items on the buffet.

At a restaurant salad buffet, it's fun to see how creative you can be. If you're on a diet, there's no need to eat the standard diet plate of cottage cheese, jello and tomato wedges on a bed of lettuce.

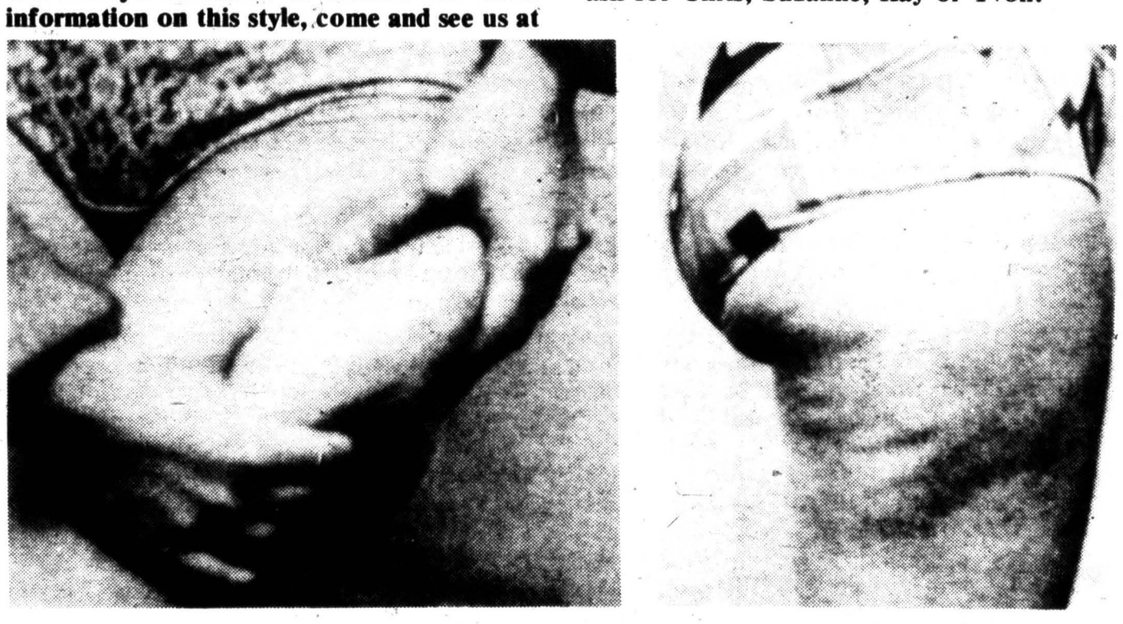
Now healthy salads don't have to be boring. Try a "crunch" salad with fresh veggies like red cabbage, broccoli, sunflower seeds, cucumbers and crackers. Top with a classic Thousand Island or reduced calorie cucumber dressing.

Fitness-conscious diners with big appetites can build a hearty Smorgasbord Salad with a little bit of everything — from mushrooms, carrots, shredded cheese and garbanzo beans to watermelon and macaroni salad.

With restaurants offering lighter options to keep pace with our changing tastes, you can still eat out and stay on the fitness track.



THIS HAIRSTYLE is classic, elegant, up-to-the-minute and perfect for even the most active lifestyle...summer or winter. For more information on this style, come and see us at Chris of Carmel Hair Association, Lincoln and Seventh, Carmel, or call 624-9469 and ask for Chris, Suzanne, Kay or Yvon.



WHAT IS CELLULITE? Cellulite (pronounced cell-u-leet) is a gel-like substance made up of fat and body fluids trapped in pockets beneath the skin. These pockets cause dimples and ripples in the thighs, inner knees, buttocks, upper arms and back, and resist ordinary efforts at diet or exercise. Shape up, feel fit and look great! Get rid of unsightly fat deposits known as "cellulite" at Figure Contour by Carole, 880 Cass Street, Monterey. 649-8800.

Acupuncturist practices ancient healing art

Dr. Hyun Huh opened his office at 995 Cass St., Monterey, just after the passage of a bill in the state legislature that licensed acupuncturists in 1978.

He practiced in his uncle's clinic in Seoul prior to coming to the United States. His uncle combines acupuncture with Western Medicine in his clinic in Korea.

Dr. Huh's practice continues a tradition in his family that dates back to the 16th Century. In the 1540s one of his ancestors, Joon Huh, a court physician, compiled a textbook on acupuncture and herbs which became a classic on the subject still used today in medical colleges throughout the world.

Dr. Huh believes strongly in the integration of Western with Oriental medicine.

He served on the medical board of the state of California examining committee to license acupuncturists, and has lectured in the postgraduate program at San Francisco College of Acupuncture.

Compute your stress level

Doctors and psychologists are calling it a "stress epidemic." The tension and pressures of modern life are taking a heavy toll on America's health and business.

The American Academy of Family Physicians reports that two-thirds of office visits to family doctors are prompted by stress-related symptoms.

Six of the leading causes of death — heart attacks, cancer, lung ailments, cirrhosis of the liver, accidental injuries and suicides — are directly or indirectly caused by stress.

Now relieving stress is as easy as turning on your computer with a new system appropriately called RELAX by Synapse, California software specialists.

Computer users can learn to monitor and control their stress levels through a scientific, yet enjoyable, computer software program — all in the comfort of their home or office.

The program allows users to "see" stress by representing muscle tension graphically on a video monitor. This tension is picked up by electromyograph (EMG) sensors on a headboard, and a control unit converts the readings into visual patterns indicating the user's level of stress. As the person reduces his or her stress level, the images on the screen change to reflect an increasing state of relaxation.

The goal of Relax is not just to monitor, but to teach people how to reduce stress. "A program like this, which is based on biofeedback, involves the use of instruments to help a person instantly see and control stress symptoms," says Dr. Martha Davis, a clinical psychologist at the Kaiser Permanente Foundation and stress reduction expert.

"Since millions of people now own home computers, Relax can be extremely useful in helping a large portion of the population to first understand how their bodies react to stress, and then to develop their own techniques for controlling stress levels — ultimately without the need for any outside apparatus."

The package includes an audio tape that guides users through a series of relaxation exercises and meditative techniques.

Dieters need helpful support

Even the most knowledgeable dieter may not succeed in battling bulges without cooperation from family and co-workers, according to a study recently published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association.

A sociological study of working women shows that these women — who want to control their weight and are well-informed about nutritional ways to do it — still are likely to fail unless they get solid support to change poor eating habits.

Conducted by Ann A. Hertzler, Ph.D., R.D. (registered dietitian), and Robert S. Schulman, Ph.D., the study focused on 100 women who say their families are all talk and no action when it comes to helping them lose excess pounds.

More than half the women surveyed are working mothers whose families prod them to diet and even scold them for not losing weight. But, at the same time the mothers are counting calories, their families bring fattening foods into the home.

What makes dieting even more difficult, says Hertzler, is when dieting mothers return home after work to face cooking high-calorie meals the women said their families demand.

While on the job, these women were not threatened by the anti-diet temptations they confronted at home, researchers found. Nearly 70 percent of them discuss dieting with their co-workers, and only three percent of their fellow employees indulge in high-calorie snacks or lunch on fattening meals and desserts.

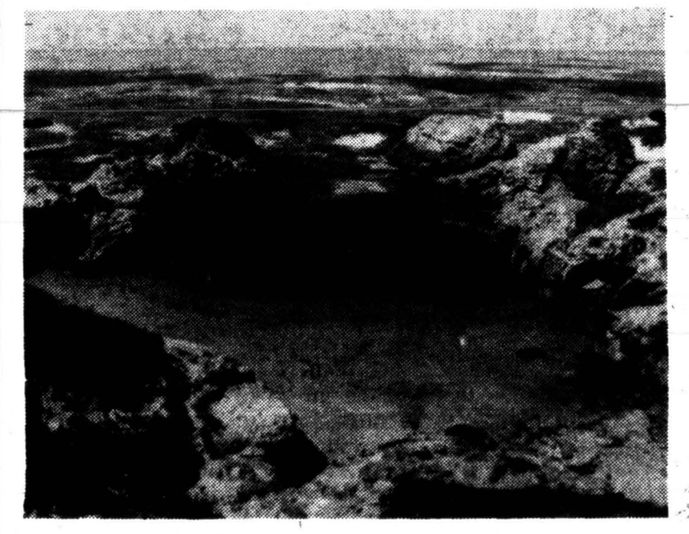
Otter Cove

Just six miles south of Carmel, across Malpaso Creek, is Otter Cove, an exclusive development of only 17 sites, each distinctly different in shape and terrain, but all sharing, in perpetuity, frontage on the ocean.

Every site enjoys unobstructed view of surf surging shoreward to cascade over rocky islets and churn snowy seafoam into narrow inlets — and this soothing wavesong is a solace to the soul.



Inside the surf-line on still, sunny days, sea otters floating on their backs munch shellfish in quiet coves like the one pictured above — and from which Otter Cove derives its name.

Awaiting exploration along the oceanside boundary of each Otter Cove site are the fascinations of abounding tidepool life. Fishing off the rocks is another pastime to be enjoyed by owners of property in this seaside setting. Whales spouting at sea, cormorants in congregation, soaring seagulls, the slow passage of pelicans — and always the drama of the ocean unfolding from sunrise, through daylong changes of light and tide, to the glory of sunset, later in mystic moonlight — all these wonders are among the joys offered owners of Otter Cove sites. At present, one homesite is available, a 1.42 acre parcel priced at $394,000. May we show you Otter Cove?

Goodwill collects goods in Valley

GOODWILL Industries' blue and white "donation station" trailer is making a return visit to Carmel Valley. It will be stationed in the Carmel Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

The trailer will be open every day, including weekends, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. Attendant Michelle Perry will be on duty to receive donations and provide receipts for tax purposes.

This is the third visit by the "traveling" Goodwill trailer to Mid-Valley where residents have generously shared surplus but usable belongings to help others. Sale of these donations fund Goodwill's rehabilitation services to the handicapped.

Last year the agency served more than 400 disabled people, helping them discover their potential for employment, acquire work skills, and find jobs that made them self-supporting.

The "traveling" Goodwill trailer project is designed to make it easier for those who do not live or work near permanent installations to make their donations.

For further information, or to schedule a Goodwill truck pickup of items too large or heavy to bring to the Carmel Mid-Valley Shopping Center station, call Goodwill at 646-8567.

Concert for young listeners

Also designed to amuse the youngsters is a work for "piano and five hands, that means two pianists and the third just does whatever has to be done. It's lots of fun. If we explain the jokes a bit to the children, they'll understand."

Other musical parodies the 32-member Festival Chorale will perform are based upon Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes and Who is Sylvia?.

"There is even a takeoff on the Bunny Hop," Mrs. Salgo added.

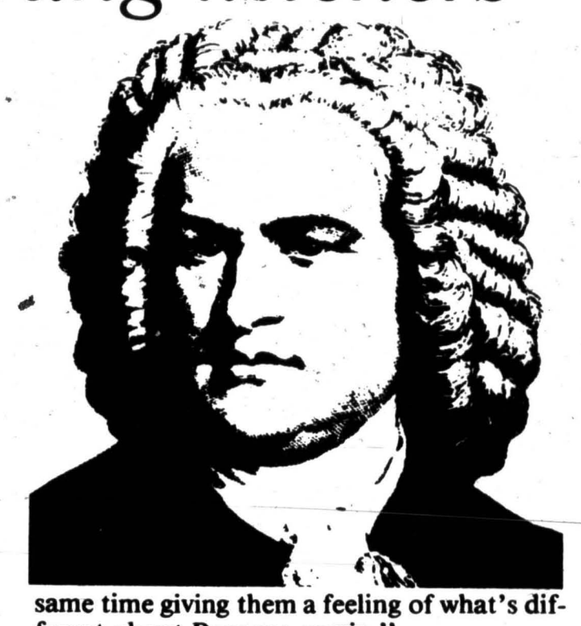
The concert is narrated by Clifford Crana, who is associated with the San Francisco Opera.

"We use our very best artists," Mrs. Salgo pointed out. Other pieces scheduled for the Concert for Young Listeners include the aria Si Suoni La Tromba by Scarlatti. It will be performed by Diane Thomas, soprano; Madeline Ingram, harpsichord; and Carole Klein, trumpet.

Carol R. Klein will direct a brass ensemble of members of the Festival Orchestra. Kevin Skiles, tenor, will sing I Will Show You, a humorous aria from Haydn's opera Orlando Paladino.

"My husband selects the pieces," Mrs. Salgo explained. "The concert tries to represent what we do at the festival. We select smaller things we think will be particularly appealing to a young listener (and) at the same time giving them a feeling of what's different about Baroque music."



Maintaining the sense of fun, the P.D.Q. Bach portions of the concert will utilize balloons as part of the orchestra.

"In a way it's a very lighthearted way of educating people what various styles of music are like," Mrs. Salgo stated.

The concert begins at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Sunset Theater, San Carlos Street and Ninth Avenue, Carmel. Adults must be accompanied by children. All tickets are 50 cents and can be purchased at the door of the theater. For more information, call 624-1521.
